The Army Antiaircraft Command BY MAJ. GEN. WILLARD W. IRVINE, USA Commanding

NEWEST and perhaps least known of the Army's major commands is the Army Antiaircraft Command, activated July 1950. The Army Antiaircraft Com-

Marine-Navy Inquiry Findings Reported

Following visits to Marine Corps and Navy installations, including the submarine base at New London, Conn., the Senate Armed Services Preparedness Subcommittee this week issued a report which provided cause for some concern at the Pentagon.

The report—the 31st made by Senator Lyndon Johnson's (D-Tex.) subcommittee —noted "a lack of cost consciousness" among officers, criticized poor utilization of Reservists, expressed doubt about the validity of submarine pay to certain Na-val personnel and told of fear of reprisals by personnel who relayed complaints to members of Congress.

As in previous reports, the Senate group maintained that "there are still too many—far too many—able-bodied men in 'chair corps' jobs. Recruiting of WAVES and Women Marines has lagged. Limited-Service personnel are not being used as widely as possible." Stressing the need for greater cost-consciousness, Senator Johnson's subcommittee said that an officer's ability to con-serve men, money and materials should be made a subject for inclusion in efficiency reports.

"Such ability," said the subcommittee,
"should be one of the basic qualifications required for promotion and advance-

The investigators stated that "extra compensation, amounting to 30 to 40 per compensation, amounting to 30 to 40 per cent of base pay, is being awarded month-ly to personnel not actually working or living aboard submarines," and added that "abuses are evident when communi-cations personnel, stewards, drivers and others who rarely, if ever, go aboard a submarine draw hazardous-duty compen-sation merely heaves they are attached sation merely because they are attached to one of the (submarine force) staffs." The report related that for the period from June to September 1951, the 153 officers and men of the Atlantic and Pacific Submarine Force (noncrew) were paid hazardous-duty compensation for a maximum total of approximately 18,000 days, "whereas, as a matter of fact, they were exposed to the hazards for only about 525

In other words, said the report, "during a four-month period, the average man served less than one week aboard a submarine.

Attached as an appendix to the sub-committee's report was a memorandum prepared by Admiral W. M. Fechteler, USN, Chief of Naval Operations, on 17

Said Admiral Fechteler:

"Personnel who are now drawing sub-marine pay are going to sea in subma-rines for a substantial number of days per month.

Promote AF Warrants

The Air Force will convene a selection board at the Pentagon on or about 14 Jan. 1952 to recommend warrant officers for temporary promotion to the W-4, W-3 and W-2 pay grades.

The best qualified method of selection

Consideration for advancement to the next highest pay grade will be extended to all personnel currently serving as warrant officer who have served at least six months in the active military service in their current pay grade or higher com-missioned grade as of 1 Sept. 1951.

Undoubtedly, the new Air Force announcement will mean promotion of hundreds of warrant officers to higher grades.

A bill which would thwart the retirement impending in 1953 for more than 900 Army permanent colonels who have five years in grade and more than 30 years service has been introduced in Con-

Meantime, at the Pentagon, detailed studies are being made regarding this problem. It is known that efforts are bening made to retain on active duty a large number of these veteran officers, but un-less legislation such as has been intro-duced is passed, it will be necessary for the President to suspend a portion of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947 to permit retention on active duty of any of these officers.

Service Legislation Prepared for 1952

Following adjournment of Congress on 20 Oct., Department of Defense officials this week were busy already with work on the legislative program for the second session of the 82d Congress, which begins in January.

Careful planning and speedy introduc-Careful planning and speedy introduction of bills and supporting data are esential, since in an election year members of Congress will want to go home as quickly as possible. Tardy bills are certain to be neglected.

Meantime, as plans for next year's legislation were being formulated both at the Pentagon and on Capitol Hill, menand women in uniform wondered how Congress will resolve the current questions.

Congress will resolve the current question mark status of vital military legislation.

What will be the fate of the 10 per cent pay raise bill, its retroactive provision eliminated by the House Armed Services Committee? Are there to be further revisions, seemingly ever upward, of Survivor Benefits payments? How about combat pay for men in Korea—a bill pending since January 1951? How will promotion policies for Reservists and bill pending since January 1851? How will promotion policies for Reservists and Guardsmen be altered? What will be done about Marine Corps representation on the JCS, where the Senate and House Armed Services Committees are in disagreement? Will Congress sustain an orderly military buildup by adequate appropriation and implementation of UMT to thwart aggression?

Obviously, these are just some of the questions which the second session of the questions which the second session of the 82d Congress must answer in the realm of military legislation. Other critical issues also will be debated—all against the background of an election year.

It is highly pertinent in the wake of the adjournment last Saturday, to review the achievements of the first session of the 82d Congress and to forecast action on defense legislation during the second session.

Noteworthy is the fact that action taken during the first session remains in effect for the session next year. However, when the 82d Congress adjourns in 1952, all pending bills will die with the sounding of the final gavel.

The carry-over of legislation from the first to the second session will mean that first to the second session will mean that soon after Congress reconvenes, the pay raise bill can be brought to a quick vote in the House. The Armed Services Committee has given the measure its unani-mittee has given the measure its unanimous endorsement.

Undoubtedly, when the measure comes up for debate in the House, an effort will be made to link combat pay to the military pay raise bill. Representative Olin Teague (D-Tex.), has said that he will take such action.

It is recalled that the Department of Defense submitted as "urgent" legislation a combat pay bill in January 1951. This piece of legislation, except for several preliminary hearings held by the Senate (Please turn to Page 269)

THE WAR IN KOREA

W HILE there was a define hall land operations in Korel to save incident to the reopening of arm negotiations, a greatly strengthened Reliant force boldly challenged Allied air superiority over Northwest Korea. Hündreds of Russian-built MIG-15 jet planes repeatedly made aggressive and sus-tained attacks on formations of United Nations bombers, fighter-bombers and escorting aircraft.

While the Reds were losers in a series of daily air-to-air combats this week they showed greatly increased aggressiveness and a disposition to fly much farther south from their secure Man-churian bases than they have heretofore demonstrated. The Communist objective in these attacks was apparently not only the destruction of Allied planes, but also to divert bombers from their interdiction missions, and to force them to jettison their bomb loads before reaching their

During the first five days of this week Allied planes destroyed 10 enemy jets, probably destroyed 5 others, and damaged at least 13. In this same period the Allies lost in air combat three B-29 medium bombers, one F-84 Thunder Jet and one F-86 Sabre Jet. Other Superforts suffered battle damage, forcing them to land at friendly bases in South Korea, instead of returning to their base in Okinawa. In addition another B-29 was shot down flak, but members of its crew were scued. An F-80 Shooting Star and an rescued. An F-50 Shooting State and F-51 Mustang were also lost to ground

This week's air battles began on Sun-This weeks air battles began on Sunday, 21 Oct., with an inconclusive encounter between 34 United States F-86 Sabre Jets and 50 enemy MIG-15s over the area between Pyongyang and Sinanju. Two enemy aircraft were reported damaged, and there was a possibility that several others were hit. None of our planes was damaged. planes was damaged.

On Monday there was a series of five distinct air encounters throughout the day. In the forenoon 32 F-86 Sabre Jets battled 50 MIGs to a scoreless tie south of Sinanju. No damage was suffered by our planes and none was inflicted on the enemy. At about the same time there a fight south of Kunu-ri between 40 MIGs and 26 F-80 Shooting Stars. Again there was no damage to either side. Later 16 MIGs attacked a formation of F-84 Thun-der Jets on an interdiction mission in the Sinanju-Sukchon area. One MIG was reported as probably damaged. None of the Thunder Jets was hit. On Monday afternoon 24 F-84 Thunder Jets escorting 9 B-29 Superforts on a bombing mission against a new enemy airfield at Taechon in Northwest Korea were attacked by 30 MIGs. There was no damage to either side in the air battle, but one of the B-29s was shot down by anti-aircraft fire. Members of the crew took to parachutes, and all were subsequently rescued by two Air Force amphibians a few miles off the west coast of Korea. The attack on the enemy airfield was very successful. Revetments and runways were heavily blasted by 1,300 high-explosive 100-lb, bombs.

On the same afternoon in the fifth air encounter of the day 32 F-86 Sabre Jets on a fighter sweep north of Anju fought 50 MIGs. In a brief and exciting battle two enemy jets were probably destroyed. None of our planes was hit. The principal air battle of the week occurred on Tuesday morning, 24 Oct. In this encounter 230 enemy MIG-15s at-tacked 85 American jet fighters. This was tacked 85 American jet fighters. This was the largest number of jet planes ever engaged in a single battle in the history of air warfare. The American planes were escorting a formation of medium bombers on a strike against a new enemy airfield at Namsi in Northwest Korea, 20 miles south of the Manchurian border.

In the heaviest and most determined nemy air attack of the war the Red jets in successive waves swooped down on the escorting F-80 Shooting Stars, F-84 Thunder Jets and F-86 Sabre Jets. The air battle began at 8:35 in the morning and continued for 20 minutes. In this combat 8 Communist jets were destroyed, 2 proboly destroyed, and 10 damaged.
One of the B-29 bombers was hit in the air attack and plunged into the sea off the west coast of Korea. The crew para-chuted from the plane and sea and air rescue operations were immediately or-dered, with hope of saving at least some members. Two other B-29s were reported lost and the North Korean radio announced that 12 airmen from a wrecked B-29 had been taken prisoner. One F-84 was also lost in the fight. Other B-29s suffered battle damage, but were able to land at Allied airfields in South Korea. Despite the enemy air interception the Superforts dropped 1,000 high explosive

Superioris dropped 1,000 high explosive 100-lb, bombs through the overcast on the new Namsi airfield. Results were unobserved. The new Red air base at this point is near completion. It has a runway approximately 6,500 feet in length and 220 feet in width. Construction work was under way at the time of the attack. under way at the time of the attack

On Wednesday, 24 Oct., the aggressive air attacks of enemy planes on Allied aircraft in Northwest Korea continued. In a bold sweep across the waist of the peninsula, 100 miles south of the Manchurian border, 155 Communist jets at tacked a formation of American and Australian jet fighters escorting B-29s on a bridge-bombing mission. One of the enemy MIGs was shot down and another damaged. One American F-86 was lost.

On Thursday three other air battles occurred in which 80 MIGs were pitted against 63 American jets and propellerdriven planes, escorting bombing flights against enemy railways. One Red jet was probably destroyed. None of our planes was hit. The Communist air attack failed to interfere with successful against transportation facilities.

Land operations during this week were overshadowed by the spectacular air activity. For the most part ground fighting was confined to minor patrol clashes, and small probing attacks, while the troops marked time awaiting the outcome of the reopened truce talks. Since the United Nations forces now occupy extremely fa-vorable positions for either defensive or offensive operations in the future, the high command has apparently decided that, for the present at least, it is un-necessary to engage in further large-scale ground action, with consequent casualties, so long as there may be some reasonable prospect of an early armis-

Principal activity on the ground during the week was on the central front where the American army 24th Division, flanked by the South Korean 2d and 6th Diviby the South Korean 2d and 6th Divisions, consolidated gains in close proximity of the former strong enemy supply base of Kumsong. The Allies now hold the high ground to the south, within a third of a mile of that city, and tank patrols entered the town to shoot up enemy installations, after which they returned to the Allied lines.

Kumsong is on relatively low ground, and so long as the Allies hold the dominating heights to the south the use of this important communications center is denied to the enemy. Located on a good road and rail network this town was very valuable as a base for logistic support of front-line Red troops. The denial of its further use for this purpose is a heavy blow to the Reds.

Elsewhere on the long battle front across the peninsula there was little action as both sides continued to patrol and maintain their positions. United Nations articles west of Vonchen reided. tions patrols west of Yonchon raided well-established enemy positions on high ground. They succeeded in occupying three knolls in a small, limited objective attack, but failed in repeated efforts to gain another.

In the Kumsong area Allied tank-infantry patrols encountered only light resistance from enemy units of platoon and company size. In consolidating their positions south and southwest of Kumsong Allied troops destroyed at least 105 bunk-ers, several buildings, and large quantities of enemy supplies. Elements of the 6th South Korean Division southeast of Kumsong encountered light to moderate resistance. No significant enemy action was reported on the remainder of the central front.

Allied patrols along the eastern front ran into light opposition from small ene-my units. Several light enemy probing attacks north of Yanggu and west of Kansong were repulsed.

The latest Defense Department estimate places enemy casualties from the start of the Korean war on 25 June 1950 through 10 October 1951 at 1,373,229. This is an increase of 26,506 for the eight-day period from 2 October, the date of the last previous estimate, and 10 October. Of the total losses 681,428 were sustained by the North Koreans and 691,801 by the Chinese Reds.

The North Koreans lost 422,298 killed and wounded, 110,909 sick and injured, and 148,221 prisoners of war. Battle casualties among the Chinese Reds were estimated at 563,888, with 109,438 non-battle casualties, and 18,475 prisoners of

It is interesting to note that the Chi-It is interesting to note that the Chinese lost about 141,000 more in killed and wounded than the North Koreans, but 130,000 fewer in prisoners of war. The big bag of North Korean prisoners was taken at the time the Allies broke out of the Korean perimeter last year. However, throughout the fighting the North ever, throughout the fighting the North Koreans have been rather more inclined to surrender than have their Chinese

The most recent report of American casualties in Korea, which includes notification to next of kin through 19 Oct., discloses that 92,997 have been killed or wounded, or are missing in action. Of these, 15,688 are listed as killed in action or died of wounds, 66,535 wounded, in-cluding 1,525 who died of wounds, and 12,477 are listed as having been missing in action, of whom 178 have been determined to have died, 1,373 returned to military control, and 173 are carried as prisoners of war in the hands of the enemy. Presumably many of the remaining 10,753 are prisoners, but have not been so officially reported, since the enemy makes public very few names of prisoners taken.

Of the total American casualties, 75,381 were sustained by the Army, 15,676 by the Marines, 1,102 by the Navy and 838

by the Air Force.

THE EUROPEAN THEATER

HE U. S. Air Force announces the 1 forthcoming departure of the 126th Light-Bomber Wing for France—the first USAF unit to be stationed in France since World War II.

It is an announcement of special interest in that this former Illinois-Missouri National Guard unit (equipped with & B-26 planes and carrying 1,600 officers and men, Brig. Gen. Frank Allen commanding) will be stationed at Bordeaux. This means that, after long delay in rearranging our air set-up to comply with recom-mendations of Lt. Gen. Lauris Norstad, our air commander in Europe, we now are on the way to have an important unit not only in France, but at the great base port which is being set up for American supply. It is encouraging evidence of progress being made in Geenral Eisenhower's program for reversing altogether our existing communications system (via Bremen) so that our supplies will flow into western Europe by a rational line of communication. The light bomber wing will be a welcome addition to the three fighter wings and two transport wings now under General Norstad. It will be re-called that we also have in Britain a medium bomber wing (B-50) and a jetfighter wing, which are there on short-term rotation, as other such units have been and others will be, in an effort to provide a maximum of our air forces with realistic training over northwest Europe.
The Twenty-eighth (Pennsylvania National Guard) division will sail for Germany shortly after its Armistice Day parade in Philadelphia, thereby following close on the Forty-third (Connecticut, Rhode Island, Vermont National Guard) division which has just completed its movement to Bremen. In both cases the divisions, summoned to Federal duty last January, entered camp at about half war-strength, and filled ranks with a few Regulars and a great many draftees from all sections of the country. With these two Guard divisions in Europe, plus the First and Fourth Infantry divisions and the Second Armored, Lt. Gen. Manton Eddy's Seventh Army will have five full divisions, to be organized in two corps.

It must be repeated that this does not mean six divisions—the term repeatedly used to describe our forces in Germany. Once our Constabulary units were properly spoken of us the "equivalent" of a erly spoken of us the "equivalent" of a sixth division, but that is no longer accurate, for the constabulary has been broken up into its three regiments, devised for use as corps and army There is no present indication whether an actual sixth division will be sent to Europe, in order to complete two normal orps of two infantry and one armored division each.

East German Communists, with usual Red duplicity, last week suddenly invaded the little nelghborhood of Steinstucken on the Berlin border and took possession. They withdrew on demand of Maj. Gen. Lemuel Mathewson, USA; then, ignoring Lemuel Mathewson, USA; then, ignoring their promise, returned long enough to surround four West Germans who had moved in to restore order. The four are protected by residents of the neighborhood, but the Issue is not yet decided.

The past week has added to the fund of official knowledge, both in the United States and in France, on matters of large interest with respect to air operations. Thomas K. Finletter, U. S. Secretary for Air, extended his overseas tour to SHAPE Air, extended his overseas tour to SHAPE for conferences with General Alfred M. Gruenther, Chief of Staff, and to nearby Fontainebleau for discussions with

"In these respects, the American people may be reassured of the treatment that is accorded to their men in uniform and of the training they are receiving. However, there are two factors of a somewhat disquieting nature that have given the members of the subcommittee concern.

"The first is the dissatisfaction among the men, principally recalled reservists, at three Marine installations. The second is the lack of cost-consciousness which affects not only Navy and Marine Corps installations but seems to characterize the operations of practically every post we have examined.

"The evidence of dissatisfaction is deeply disturbing to the members of the subcommittee. This dissatisfaction, we believe, has arisen primarily from the fact that the unexpected outbreak of hostilities in Korea required the very rapid remobilization of men in the Reserves. These men had many reasons to believe, prior to the outbreak of hostilities, that no occasion would again soon arise requiring their return to military service. the Reserves. These men had many reasons obelieve, prior to the outbreak of hostilities, that no occasion would again soon arise requiring their return to military service. The seriousness of the military situation, the shortage of trained men, and the speed with which the forces generally, and the Marines particularly, had to be mobilized resulted in the disruption of many homes newly established or reestablished, the separation of husbands from wives and children, and the creation of numerous financial and other personal problems that could not immediately be dealt with. Undoubtedly, the necessity for rapid remobilization came from our earlier rapid demobilization. For that demobilization all of us, Congressmen and laymen alike, must assume some responsibility. But wherever the responsibility may ultimately ile, the conditions thereby created and now wasting must be dealt with immediately. "We are all familiar with the glorious well since its birth.

"We are not happy to report that some discontent has appeared among elements of this proud force. For generations, the esprit decorps of the Marines has been one of the most inspiring traditions of our Nation.

"It will be understandable if some come forward to claim that the national interest will suffer from such a report. It will be understandable but it will be wrong—tragically wrong.

understandable but it will be wrong—tragl-cally wrong.

"We cannot conscientlously acquit our-selves of our duties unless we act to protect the fighting men who make up the Marine Corps. We believe their dissatisfaction will apidly abate once they are convinced of the solid backing of the American people and their representatives in the Congress.

"That is our objective.

Cost Consciousness

Cost Consciousness

"The factor of cost-consciousness is more complex and will engage the full attention of the subcommittee for some time to come. It involves waste—waste in manpower and waste in money—and at this critical juncture our Nation can afford neither.

"We are well aware of the difficulties inherent in this problem. A military post is not a factory or a business office and our military leaders are not trained to be accountants or economy experts. They are trained to a specific task—the defense of this country—and we are confident that they are completely competent to perform their duties.

"The subcommittee believes it is signifi-"The subcommittee believes it is significant that most of the information we have received on waste at military posts has come through reports from enlisted men—reserves fresh from civilian life. These men with their close ties to civilian problems are deeply conscious of the drain on the taxpayer's dollar. They know that our economy cannot endure profligate spending forever and that without a strong economy we cannot have a strong defense.

"We hope that the cost consciousness of the enlisted men can somehow permeate upward through the ranks. But we are not going to be satisfied with mere hope. We believe that this problem is too serious to be ignored and that action is urgently required.

"Of course, we one is going to send cost."

be ignored and that action is urgently of quired.

"Of course, no one is going to send cost accountants to the Far East with a demand that General Ridgway explain why he is not that General Ridgway explain why he is not trunning the war more cheaply. Of course, no one is going to ask front-line officers for lengthy reports on whether they are using their men efficiently.

"But, as is apparent from the reports of our investigations, these things are not involved. What we are talking about is the routine day-by-day waste that goes on at domestic military installations—waste that would make any prudent businessman shuder. It is waste of materials—waste of men by improper assignment — the waste that comes when men are assigned to jobs where no jobs should exist or where three men are assigned to a job that one could do. "The Navy and Marine Corps periodically rate the officers at their domestic installations. This rating is based upon a number of qualifications—none of which specifically involves economy of operation or recognizes ability to conserve men, money, or materials. "It is our belief that in the future the armed services should add a new rating category. It should be labeled 'cost conaclousness' and should be one of the basic qualifications for promotion and advancement. "It is impossible, of course, to estimate the savings that could be made through a determined effort by each commander to cut out all waste. But their can be no doubt on the basis of studies that we have made thus far that it would be great.

"Regardless of its size, it would be a welcome boon to the suffering taxpayer who must foot the bill for our defense program."

"The men in our naval and marine forces

"The men in our naval and marine lorces are well fed.

"This is not to say that our investigators heard no complaints or that they found perfect conditions everywhere. Some cooks lacked experience; some supervisory personnel were not as competent or as efficient as they should be. Once in awhile poor meals were served. But, on the whole, good, wholesome, well-prepared food was available in sufficient quantities to all personnel."

Clothing

With very few exceptions, each man was in possession of his authorized allowances which appeared to be sufficient to meet the requirements of training and off-duty activities. The exceptions involved nontariff or unusually large or small sizes which very often are not stocked at station level and must be specially ordered from central depots.

"The monetary clothing allowance given to enlisted personnel to purchase replacements for worn-out items seems to be adequate in most cases. However, it was reported that cooks and mechanics, men with jobs very hard on clothes, were having some difficulty in meeting clothing expenditures with their allowances. We feel that the services should review monetary allowances or the procedures for supplying replacements of clothing in such cases, and authorize equitable increases where indicated.

"A rumor was current among enlisted marines that clothing prices at surplus stores were less than those charged by the quartermaster. Upon investigation it was found that there was little basis to this rumor. A check of a military surplus store in Santa Ana, Calif., a city adjacent to the El Toro Air Station, revealed that most of the items differed in quality or design from those sold through the quartermaster. Where a varience in price for identical items was noted, the variance was found to be insignificant."

Marale

The morale at three of the six installa-"The morale at three of the six installations covered by this report is excellent. However, the subcommittee was disturbed to find that at the Marine Corps bases at Lejuene, Pendleton, and El Toro some dissatisfaction existed. This was discouraging in view of the long history of high morale and espirit the long history of high morale and espirit de corps of the marines.

"The dissatisfaction at these stations certainly cannot be attributed to the lack of food, housing, clothing, or recreation. The physical and more obvious needs of the marines have been well provided. The primary cause of the dissatisfaction at the three installations may be traced initially to the extremely rapid recall of military reservists to active duty.

"A great number of these men feel they were torn from their families, homes, and jobs unnecessarily. Veterans of World War II were called to perform duties which inexperienced younger men could readily han-

The were called to perform duties which in-experienced younger men could readily han-dle. These veterans cannot understand why draft quotas were reduced while at the same time the services were telling reservisis that they would be replaced as rapidly as possible with newly inducted men.

"Investigators for this subcommittee found evidence that many reservists were being evidence that many reservists were being used in jobs which certainly ought not to have justified asking a man to once again break up his home, family, and career—when other men who have not served at all were available. A staff sergeant, an inactive reservist, was found issuing equipment at the golf course at EI Toro. This was the sergeants full-time duty. It would be impossible to convince this man that he was really needed and that there was sufficient cause to recall him to active duty. In civilian life he worked as an apprentice carman for a railroad. He had been rated as a basic aircraft engine mechanic; but, for reasons unknown to him, his rating had been changed to athletic and recreation assistant—a formidable title for one relegated to issuing golf equipment. Many similar examples could be cited.

"No successful effort has been made to explain adequately the corps' policy regarding reservists. The lack of information extends beyond the Reserve problem. The extigencies of the Korean situation have not been brought home to the individual. The international problems facing this Nation remain vague and blurred in the minds of many men whom we ask to spill their blood so that these problems may be resolved. The attitude of many of the officers appears to be that of superior righteousness and unquestionable authority. They, in effect, say to the reservist—and to the Regulars—'you're in now, there is nothing you or anyone else can do about it, so you had better take it and like it."

There is a desperate need for a systematic "There is a desperate need for a systematic and intelligently conceived and conducted program of troop information. The Marine Corps should be guided by the steps taken in this direction by the Army and Air Force. Such a program should be designed to keep the individual marine informed of policy decisions and how such decisions will affect him personally. The program should also be aimed at keeping all ranks abreast of events of international significance and the extent to which these events may affect their future. "Another factor contributing to dissatispersonally. The program absolute also dealmed at keeping all ranks abreast of events of international significance and the extent to which these events may affect their future.

"Another factor contributing to dissatisfaction at Marine installations is the lack of a realistic system through which an enlisted man may receive a fair hearing for his grievances. Rightly or wrongly, the average marine feels that, should he compilain, reprisals will be taken against him. He harbors little hope that his complaint will be acted upon. Marines interviewed by subcommittee investigators cited the visits of the Inspector General as an example of one of the unsatisfactory methods employed by the corps to afford enlisted men an opportunity to 'sound off.' Reportedly the Inspector walks through the ranks closely followed by the troop commander and a sergeant. The sergeant carries a pencil and paper and records the name of anyone bold enough to indicate that everything is not perfect. Rarely does one dare to incite the wrath of the sergeant, let alone the troop commander.

"It is true that following this information the Inspector General holds a 'request mast' at which the enlisted man is granted the opportunity of presenting his grievances in detail. However, the commanding officer or one of his representatives is usually present at this session, and the enlisted man is faced with a situation hardly conducive to a full and frank statement of his complaints.

"This, at best, presents an unhealthy situation. Responsible officers are kept in ignorance of many deficiencies in their commands which warrant immediate correction. Men with legitimate and justifiable grievances can find no outlet for them, and thus become disgruntled as abuses go unchecked.

"The subcommittee findings with respect to the described dissatisfaction are based upon interviews with enlisted men conducted by investigators all of whom had prior military experience. These investigators, working in teams of two, spent 3 days, and talked to several hundred enlist

Training

"The subcommittee is gratified to report that at each of these bases training was excellent. Instructor personnel, many of whom have had combat experience in World War II or in Korea, appear to be well qualified. "Classroom lectures were interesting and held the attention of students. Field exercises were conducted under realistic conditions."

Excellent use was made of training aids.

Manpower Utilization

"In its twenty-sixth report, Manpower Utilization at Military Indoctrination Centers, issued in June 1951, this subcommittee recommended that the armed services replace, wherever possible, able-bodied military personnel employed in 'chair corps' positions with limited service, female military, or civilian personnel. This recommendation was based upon the knowledge that this Nation faces a severe shortage of young men who are physically fit for combat assignment. Under full mobilization, we shall not be able to waste our able-bodied men in administrative and clerical functions. Therefore, the subcommittee sees no logic in spending thousands of dollars and man-hours, and utilizing scarce training facilities preparing men for jobs that will have to be filled by others

Committee Hits Lack Of Dependent Care

The Senate Armed Services Preparedness Subcommittee this week expressed concern with the lack of adequate medical care for dependents at a number of Navy and Marine Corps installations. "In view of the frequency with which this matter was mentioned to the investigators," a Subcommittee report declared "every possible means of providclared, "every possible means of provid-ing full medical care for dependents should be thoroughly explored."

,The report stated:

"Both enlisted men and officers com-plained that the limitations of the in-firmaries severly restricted the service rendered to dependents. Obviously, it is not feasible to provide more than out-patient service for dependents. Complete maternal care is, of course impossible maternal care is, of course, impossible.

"At New London, (Conn.)," the report observed, "our investigators were told of babies being born in ambulances en route to Quonset which is 45 miles away. Other family emergency cases must be trans-ferred to Newport, nearly 100 miles distant. Apparently, there are infirmary wards which could be made available to dependents but, reportedly, there are insufficient doctors and nurses to handle the additional burden."

should this Nation become involved in an should this Nation become involved in an all-out conflict.

"The Department of Defense, while not completely accepting the subcommittee's position, has made efforts to give limited effect to the subcommittee's recommendation. Efforts have been made to step up recruitment of women. More limited-service men have been inducted. Surveys directed toward replacement of able-bodied men in 'chair corps' jobs have been undertaken.

"In spite of the alleged efforts made by the Department of Defense, the six naval installations treated in this report have made little progress. Out of a total administrative overhead complement of approximately 30,000 people, only 500 were servicewomen. These 500 were confined to three of the bases, while the other three bases were utilizing no women military personnel whatsoever.

"The record is better with respect to civilian employees. Civilians are filling 27 percent of the administrative overhead posi-

"The extent to which limited-service per-sonnel are utilized is negligible. However, several hundred Korean veterans, many of whom are disabled, have been assigned to several hundred korean veteraus, many or whom are disabled, have been assigned to Marine stations.

"In its report on manpower utilization at military indoctrination centers, the subcommittee noted that, at the 16 installations visited, there were well over five divisions of men assigned to overhead functions. At the six installations treated in the present report we have again found large overhead organizations staffed, for the most prit, by able-bodied men. Enough of these men could be replaced to give us another division for our combat forces.

"The subcommittee recognizes that there are factors limiting the extent to which the replacements of able-bodied men in 'chair corps' positions is possible.

"Nevertheless, we firmly believe that the naval services, including the Marine Corps, should make a more conscientious effort to free a greater number of physically fit men for combat duty."

Clarify Promotion Plans

Misinterpretation of a recent announcement regarding temporary promotions for officers selected as "outstanding" was clarified this week.

The Army recently sent a message to the field allowing officers recalled to active duty to accrue six months of active duty for promotion purposes prior to 1 Nov. 1951 as contrasted with the 1 July 1951 date stated in Circular 22.

In effect, the new statement afforded opportunities for advancement to officers recently recalled to service.

The message did not, it was stressed, change criteria or previously announced procedures in selection of officers for promotion. It is pointed out, however, that outstanding officers must now be recom-mended by a general officer. The action was taken to insure that only the most outstanding officers are recommended for advancement outside of the basic zone of consideration.

There now exists a recommended list for promotion to lieutenant colonel, major and captain and these eligible offi-cers will be promoted before any others.

Speed Allotment System

A faster, simpler way for an Army member in Korea to allot part of his pay to a dependent in Japan is in operation, Maj. Gen. Bickford E. Sawyer, Chief of Finance, announced this week.

The usual (Class "E") pay allotment requires authorization and payment to be made by the Army Finance Center in St. Louis, Mo.

But for fast "emergency" service in the Far East Command only, the Finance Corps has established the Class "X" Allotment system. SR 35-1900-20, dated 4 Oct. 1951, gives details.

Under the Class X plan, authorization and payment are handled by the Finance disbursing officer in the area where the dependents live.

Both soldiers and permanent civilian employees of the Army in the Far East may allot their pay to dependents who live in that command area under the Class X plan.

Navy Travel to Far East

The Navy has outlined additional plans for travel of dependents to overseas areas in the Pacific.

Admiral Arthur W. Radford, USN, Commander in Chief of the Pacific Fleet, has been delegated authority to authorize transportation to Pacific areas, and Rear Adm. Edgar A. The Navy said that with the resumption of dependent travel to Japan on 1 Nov., "Priority lists will be established by area commanders for travel in November and each succeeding month."

Rear Adm. Bertram J. Rodgers, USN, Commandant of the 12th Naval District, will be responsible for processing deendents for travel upon receipt of prior-

Naval personnel reporting to Japan for duty may apply to the area commander for housing and transportation of dependents, the Navy said. It was pointed out, however, that at the present time "concurrent travel of dependents is not usually authorized."

Applications for entry approval into other open areas of the Pacific should be submitted to the area commander con-cerned. Approved applications for Alaskan travel are to be forwarded to Com-Thirteen, and all others to ComTwelve. Dependents who do not receive approval for concurrent travel are entitled to transportation to points of selection.

The Navy has also authorized ship-nents of household goods to Japan as follows:

A—Shipment for military personnel limited to 25 percent authorized net weight allowance or 2,000 pounds net weight, whichever is greater, plus 40 percent packing allowance for water movement. This restriction does not preclude shipment of professional books, papers, equipment and the weight of such items is exclusive of the restricted allowance.

B—Shipment for civilian personnel limited 3,125 pounds gross.

The bill, which would expand the Marine Corps to four divisions and four air wings, with a minimum strength of 300, 000, has been pending in the Congress since last Spring. It was passed in the Senate by unanimous resolution on the Senate 4 May, and reported by the House Committee on Armed Services by a vote of 26 to one on 30 June.

26 to one on 30 June.

Mr. Mansfield said "The reasons it has not been brought before the House as yet are several. A reading of the House committee report makes it obvious that, although the Congress of the United States wants this law and the people of the United States want this law, the Defense Department is opposed to it."

He said Army, Navy and Air Force leaders "have a fear that the day will come when the Marine Corps will get more of the defense dollar than they think it should have as opposed to what their services get." He added that there is "an absolute refuse! upon the part of is "an absolute refusal upon the part of the Department of Defense to recognize the Marine Corps in fact as to what it is in law, namely, a separate military service within the Department of the Navy."

Representative Mansfield's views were supported by two other former Marines, Representatives Daniel J. Flood (D-Pa) and James T. Patterson (R-Conn).

At the Signal Corps' request, RCA engineers undertook to streamline the older, heavier model—which many a soldier of World War II called "the backie-breakie." Following principles of subminiaturization—pioneered at RCA Laboratories—every one of its hundreds of parts was redesigned. Models were built, tested, rebuilt, and finally RCA came up with an instrument weighing only 29 pounds. Its range is double that of the World War II model.

Even more important, under present conditions, RCA was able to beat the most optimistic estimate of the time needed to design such an instrument by nearly three months. Signal Corps engineers have called this "A major engineering and production achievement."

Comparison with the older model portable radiotelephone shows how successfully RCA engineers have reduced its size with their new instrument.

Meteorology Course Open

A one-year course in meteorology, which will be offered at government ex-pense at civilian colleges and universities, has been offered to Air Force lieutenants now on active duty and who wish to en-ter the weather officer career field. This is announced by Brig. Gen. W. O. Senter, USAF, Chief, Air Weather Service with headquarters at Andrews AFB, Md. He stated that the course is a basic require-ment for junior officers who wish to take advantage of the opportunities for rapid advancement through the weather officer career plan.

To qualify for meteorological training the applicant must possess a baccalaure-ate degree including mathematics through integral calculus plus one year of college physics. Applicants also must hold a commission in the USAF or USAF Reserve in grade of Lieutenant, Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps (AF-ROTC) students during their senior year, may apply to enter the one-year meteoro-logical course after graduation.

DSM For Gen. Douglass

Maj. Gen. Robert W. Douglass, jr., USAF commanding general, 18th Air Force, has been presented the nation's third highest award, the Distinguished Service Medal.

Gen. Douglass received the medal for exceptionally meritorious service to the exceptionally meritorious service to the government in positions of great responsibility during the period 15 April, 1944 to 22 June, 1945, when he was commanding general of the 7th Air Force and deputy commander Task Force 93 in the Pacific Theater.

Lt. Gen. John K. Cannon, USAF, com-manding general, Tactical Air Command, made the presentation during a special ceremony at Donaldson AFB, S. C., which was part of a review staged by the 375th Troop Carrier Wing on celebration of completion of its first year of active duty since recall as a reserve unit.

Flight Chief Name Change

Often called the key man in Air Fo asic training, the flight chief of La land AFB, Tex., has received a new title and new scope of duties.

and new scope of duties.

The change represents a major shift in the indoctrination training program at San Antonio's Gateway base. Lackland flight chiefs hereafter will bear the title of Tactical Instructors, under policy delineated by Brig. Gen. Wycliffe E. Steele, USAF, base commander.

The redesignation represents a broadening of the concept of the non-com in charge of Air Force recruits as prin-charge of Air Force recruits as prin-cipally a "big brother" to inclusion of specific educational responsibilities. The tactical instructor hereafter will not be primarily a drill sergeant, or enforcer of discipline.

He will be a graduate of the Air Force General Instructors school maintained at Lackland. He will be a specialist in a definite career field of instruction, such as weapons marksmanship or mathematics, but will have an opportunity to gain experience by service in various instructor spots.

It has been estimated that from 75 to 80 per cent of the military knowledge gained during a recruit's basic training period is imported by his tactical instructor. The nesistion although roughly equiv. tor. The position, although roughly equivalent to that of an Army platoon sergeant, a Marine drill instructor, or a Navy company commander, has no counterpart in the other branches of service.

The tactical instructor will continue to join each flight of 60 to 70 new arrivals at Lackland the first day. Each instructor will continue to remain with his flight until it has been graduated from doctrination training.

Following a year-long lapse during which the Air Force concentrated on emergency training of medical officers, the Basic Course in Aviation Medicine has been resumed at the Air Force School of Aviation Medicine, Randolph AFB, Tex.

AFB, Tex.

Several new features characterize the reorganized basic, or Flight Surgeon course, as it is commonly called. Most important, perhaps, according to Brig. Gen. Otis O. Benson jr., USAF, Commandant of the school, is the lengthening of this course from one to two years of formal training, and the incorporation of one year of this training at selected civilian universities. In addition, provision is made for three years of field training for graduates, desgned to qualify them for certification in the speciality of aviation medicine. of aviation medicine.

Thirty-one officers have been enrolled in the re-activated Flight Surgeon course. Of these, six will study this year at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, the first civilian school offering specialized training in aviation medicine. It is expected that other medical schools subsequently will be designated to supplement the formal training offered at the School of mal training offered at the School of Aviation Medicine.

The six include Maj. Paul E. Wright and Capts. William R. Turner and Eugene E. Van Vranken, who graduated from the basic course before it was suspended, and Capts. Robert H. Adams, Kay R. Air Guard Hits Promotions

The Special Air Advisory Committee of the National Guard Association this week criticized present Air Force promotion policies and stated that while 80 per cent of officers on duty with the Air Force are from the reserve forces, "investigation will disclose a surprising and shocking discrimination of the state of th discrimination against this class of offi-cers."

The Committee, headed by Brig. Gen. Errol H. Zistel of Ohio, had this to say with regard to promotion policies in reporting to the annual convention of the National Guard Association in Washing-

"Your Committee feels that the present system of promotion in time of National emergency should be changed by legislative enactment. It is the opinion of this Committee that the only fair and equitable system of promotion which can and will be maintained would be by the promotion en bloc and en masse of fully qualified officers based upon their date of rank or duty in the grade from which they are being promoted. This Committee would not condone the promotion of officers not qualified; however, those officers whom the local commander "did not" feel qualified for promotion should be placed before a local legally constituted board, for a determination of their unfitness, and unless this board found the officer unqualified, the promotion would result. By the same token, officers holding temporary rank should not be administratively reduced until all officers junior in grade are reduced, unless after full hearing before a proper board."

In addition to General Zistel, other members were Brig. Gen. Chester A.

Charles of New Jersey, Maj. Gen. George G. Finch of Georgia, Brig. Gen. Leonard E. Thomas of California, Col. Charles Sweeney of Massachusetts, and Col. Joseph J. Foss of South Dakota.

Col. S. E. Manzo, Chief of the Training Division, SAC Directorate of Operations, Offutt AFB, Nebr., has been named commanding officer of the 111th Strategic Reconnaissance Wing, based at Fairchild AFB, Wash. He will assume his new command about 5 Nov., following two years of service at Strategic Air Command Headourters. Headquarters.

Forced Retirements. Senator Cain's bill to postpone the effective date of the forced retirement of some 900 Army colonels brings sharply before Congress a problem which has been giving the Service cause for considerable anxiety. The situation is brought about by the provision of the Officer Personnel Act which eliminates from the active list those officers who have completed 30 years service including five in the grade of colonel. Under its present effective date of 30 June 1953 there would be many forced out who are still in their early 50's. Such a procedure would cut short the useful careers of many qualified officers and would be not only unfair to the individuals but uneconomical for the Government. At a time when the manpower shortage is being stressed on every hand, it is extremely difficult to defend such a procedure on the ground that it speeds the flow of promotion. At any rate, it is imperative that some final decision be reached in the matter at an early date, so that those who would be so retired will know where they stand and be able to plan their future accordingly.

When Senator Cain's bill is brought before the Armed Services Committee, it is inevitable that discussion will be broadened to include the forced retirements of flag officers of the Navy and general officers of the Army, Air Force, and Marine Corps. In normal times such retirements might be required to bring younger men to the top grades and thus increase the pool of officers with experience in high command. However, to drop highly qualified leaders solely because they have served a given number of years in grade and while they are yet physically vigorous and mentally alert does not sit well with the public. The need is so great these days that it would seem to be a simple matter to retain them as extra numbers in grade and thus continue to benefit from their vast technical knowledge and experience without blocking the advancement of others.

Pay and Taxes. President Truman this week signed legislation raising the pay of 1,100,000 classified and postal employees of the Federal government. The civilian pay boost is retroactive to the first pay period in July. A special rush effort was made to effect the back payments before 1 Nov. when new and increased tax rates will be levied.

For military personnel, it's entirely a different tack. No pay boost is now possible before 1 Feb. 1952, at the earliest. The House Armed Services Committee knocked out the retroactive clause. On 1 Nov., the new tax rates will mean a significant cut in take-home pay for military personnel.

It's as simple and unjust as this: a pay raise for all others - a pay cut for members of the Armed Forces.

Civilian Orientation. Some 75 representatives of business, industry, education, labor, and the churches returned to their homes this week after nine days attendance at the tenth Joint Civilian Orientation Conference. At the invitation of Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett, these leaders from all over the United States spent two days at the Pentagon listening and giving their reaction to discussion by civilian and military chiefs of the Department of Defense, the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps as well as the State Department, the Atomic Energy Commission, the Office of Defense Mobilization, the Research and Development Board and other agencies concerned in the defense efARMY NAVY AIR FORCE fort. Following these sessions, they journeyed to Quantico to be briefed on Marine Corps functions and to witness field demonstrations. Similar briefings and demonstrations followed, for the Navy aboard the USS Midway off Norfolk, for the Army at Ft. Benning, Ga., and for the Air Force at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.

The tenth conference, as those that have gone before, demonstrated the great value of the civilian orientation program as initiated by the first Secretary of Defense, the late James Forrestal. The Department gains from the reactions and suggestions afforded by the visitors. The industrial leaders, most of whom are heavily engaged in defense work, see their products in the hands of the using services, and all learn at first hand the magnitude of the problems before the Department and the fighting forces and the use to which their tax money is being put. That they all went home deeply impressed with the efficient conduct of the conference, and with a more intimate understanding of the many factors with which the services have to contend, and that they will carry these lessons to their associates and neighbors, make these orientation conferences of great value to the Armed Services and the nation.

Better Promotions

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

A soundly conceived program of personnel management should provide for the rapid promotion of out-standing personnel. Department of the Army recognition of this concept is evidenced by the recent announcement that commanders may submit letters of recommendation for outstanding officers. However, I feel that the decentralized basis on which these letters of recommendation for promotion are to be submitted precludes the achievement of the best possible results.

The term "outstanding" is relative and should be weighted against the entire corps of officers as opposed to individual commands. The scope, format, frequency and evaluation of efficiency reports when properly handled at each step should permit selection of the outstanding officers of the officer corps on a centralized beals. Aside from this inherent limitation of the proposed plan, other serious shortcomings of the proposed plan are obvious. As a general rule the elements of the military educational system above branch level contain student bodies within which are found the outstanding officers as measured over a period of years. As students at the time the required letters of recommendation are called for, these officers will not participate in the program. Furthermore these same schools (C&GSC, AWC, AFSC) as well as USMA and other service schools contain faculties that their commanders classify as outstanding. Having many such top officers, these commanders may be reluctant to submit letters of recommendations on anyone at all. Thus the conclusion is readily apparent—the desired results have not been obtained.

In the best interests of all concerned I suggest that the Army abandons the policy of favoring particular interest groups and set up a promotion policy based on the following two concepts:

1. All promotions be centralized at Department of Army level using a properly evaluated efficiency report. This evaluation should be correlated with:

2. Years of active federal service. This precludes the consideration of NG, ROTC, USMA and other miscellaneous service which is now included either directly or indirectly (age of integrated officers, NG

In adopting a promotion scheme based on the above concepts, special consideration should be given to the officers jeopardized when the Army changed the basis of post war temporary promotions from the permanent promotion list to the rank currently held on a temporary basis. This can be done by setting up a special zone of consideration including all of the officers whose then temporary rank was higher than the temporary rank of officers promoted temporarily on the basis of the permanent promotion list. I feel that this is an irreducible necessity if justice is to prevail in that many of the officers receiving the first post war temporary promotions were high on the permanent list by virtue of age alone. This is not a particularly good promotion criterion. In the zone of consideration that I have proposed, selection should be on the same basis as that used for the first post war promotions, either best qualified or fully qualified.

I am of the opinion that if the injustices caused by unwarranted promotion policy vaciliation are corrected and the concepts included above are embraced in a new Army promotion plan, a mutual benefit will accrue to both the military personnel and to the Nation.

Out Of The Money

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I deplore the careless use of adjectives. I must voice my objections to the particularly offensive choice of several in your columns on 13 October 1951.

You say in that issue of the Journal that Congres sional leaders credit the Department of Defense with "astute" timing in handling the pay raise request for military personnel. At the same time you report that 'the Senate Armed Services Committee indicates it will detour consideration of the pay boost until January because of the pending adjournment." Do you call it "astute" if you lock the barndoor after the horse is stolen?

Let's call a spade a spade and admit that the Department of Defense in handling the pay raise request was late, slow, tardy, slack, dilatory, behind time, belated, or anything but "astute" in its timing. Don't let anyone kid the troops! Your liking the Pentagon to a jockey who made his bid at just the right moment with "canny skill" (another objectionable adjective) seems far-fetched to the extreme. Your not-so-astute jockey waited until the 82d running of the Congressional Freakness was in the homestretch before he even entered the race, much less made his bid.

AT the first meeting of the reopened Korean armistice conference at Panmunjom on Thursday, 25 Oct., the United Nations delegation presented a concrete proposal for a line between the opposing forces in the event of a cease-fire agreement. It provides for a demilitarized zone two and one-half miles in width across the Korean peninsula, following generally the present battle line. However, the Allies would relinquish to the Reds a triangular area in Eastern Korea in return for a comparable territorial concession by the Communists in Western Korea. Each wedge-shaped tract would consist of about 200 square miles. Neither area is of outstanding strategic importance.

Under the Allied proposal the western extremity of the line would be at the Han River estuary, then it would turn north to the 38th parallel, and the demarcahan River estuary, then it would turn north to the 38th parallel, and the demarcation zone would extend east and northeast, slightly north of Kaesong, and generally in the direction of the battle line to a point on the east coast midway between Kansong and Kosong. The heights south of Kumsong, recently seized by the Allies, and several miles of shore line on the east coast would be included in the tract to be relinquished to the Reds. However, United Nations forces would retain control of hard-won Heartbreak Ridge, north of Yanggu on the east central front. The Communists would be required to cede the area in Western Korea between the battle line and the 38th parallel including the terms of Vaccour. line and the 38th parallel, including the town of Kaesong.

At the Friday session of the conference, the Reds presented a counter proposal, suggesting a buffer zone running for the most part from six to ten miles north of the 38th Parallel. Under the Red proposal, the Allies would give up most of the gains attained in the recent autumn offensive, including Heartbreak Ridge, the Punchbowl, the heights south of Kumsong, and the area within the old Iron Triangle. The Reds would retain Kaesong, but would give up some militarily unimportant terrain in the west. The Allies promptly rejected the Red offer, but apparently it opens up the possibility of an acceptable compromise, since for the first time the Communists have receded from their insistence that the demarcation line be along the 38th Parallel.

After considerable haggling the Communists finally agreed this week to resumption of armistice negotiations in Korea on terms substantially the same as previously proposed by the United Nations and the truce talks were resumed. The village of Panmunjom, between the lines in Western Korea, was accepted by both sides as the new conference site, and a large tent was pitched in a bean patch for the meetings. A compromise was reached on the size of the neutral zone; it was made somewhat larger than proposed by the Allies, but somewhat smaller than requested by the Communists. The United Nations promised to use every reasonable means to prevent Allied planes from flying over the area, and panels and balloons were employed to mark the zone, to aid pilots in identifying it.

The Communist delegation for the reopened peace talks was changed somewhat from that which participated in previous discussions, which were broken off two months ago. General Nam II of the North Korean army remains as principal Red negotiator, but Chinese General Liu Kwang-wu replaced General Tung Hua, and North Korean General Kim Pu San succeeded General Chang Pyong Can. It was reported from Formosa without confirmation that General Tung would take command of so-called Chinese volunteers fighting as a part of the Communist rebel army against French and native troops in Indo-China.

There was some speculation that this change in personnel of the Red truce delegation might portend a possible change in attitude of the Communist representatives. It was pointed out that devious Communist maneuvers in the past have shown that where a change in policy is contemplated there has often been a change in personnel. Some observers are hopeful that there may be a change in Red policy as to the location of the proposed armistice line between the forces, and that the Communists might now be willing to accept the Allied proposal for a line more or less conforming to the present battle front.

If such a concession were made a major obstacle to the success of the conference would be removed. Other points on the agenda could probably be quickly resolved and a cessation of hostilities would then be definitely in sight.

The official Peiping radio this week quoted Premier Mao Tse-tung of Red China as saying that the Communists would continue to "resist America" until the United States accepts Red peace proposals in Korea. He added that armistice negotiations "will be a success if America takes a rational stand in the truce talks."

▶ THE SITUATION IN EGYPT, where the government has attempted to denounce unilaterally existing agreements with the British and to oust British troops and officials from the Suez Canal area and from the Sudan, has shown little improvement. Egyptian mobs roamed the streets of Cairo this week, demanding arms with which to fight the British. These demonstrations are directed against the Americans as well as the British, but the rioters have been prevented from reaching foreign embassies and legations and from doing serious damage to foreign property.

The firm stand of the British in this crisis seems to have had a sobering effect on some Egyptian officials, who have restrained the local troops and demonstrators from serious clashes with British troops. The British this week tightened their hold on the Suez Canal by seizing the harbor and rail station at Port Suez, with practically no opposition. British garrisons at the canal and in the Sudan were promptly reinforced and warships have been moved to protect the sea lanes. Reconnaissance flights of Royal Air Force jet planes over Egypt are daily reminders that the British have the will and the strength to retain possession of the vital Suez link in Commonwealth communications. It was reported from Cairo that the United States had offered to act as mediator.

► THE BRITISH OIL CONTROVERSY with Iran was discussed by President Truman and Iranian Premier Mohammed Mossadegh at a Blair House luncheon in Washington on Tuesday, 23 Oct. Present also were the Iranian ambassador to the United States, Secretary of State Dean Acheson, Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett, and several State Department experts. There was some hope that a reopening of direct negotiations for settlement of the dispute might result from this conversation. Pre-viously the Security Council of the United Nations had deferred action on a complaint filed against Iran by Great Britain. The postponement was undoubtedly prompted by a not too well grounded hope that the controversy might somehow be settled without United Nations intervention. While in Washington, Premier Mossadegh, who is in ill health, was quartered at Walter Reed General Hospital at the Army Medical third blasts were merely designated as explosions, but the second, which occurred only a short time ago, was termed an atom bomb. Marshal Joseph Stalin said after the second White House announcement that a series of tests of atomic weapons was planned by the Soviet Union. Apparently the Russian tests coincide with somewhat similar experiments now being conducted by the Atomic Energy Commission in General J. Lawton Collins, Chief of Staff of the United States Army, this week accompanied French General Jean de Lattre de Tassigny on an inspection of the front in Indo-China, where French and native troops, under General de Lattre's command, are battling Communist rebels. General Collins arrived soon after heavy shipments of American military supplies and equipment had been received by the General Cates to Leave Post—The Marine Corps Commandant, General Clifton B. Cates said this week that he plans to give up the top Marine post when his present term expires on 1 Jan., but that he will not retire.

Now in Korea where he is making a tour of the battlefront, General Cates made his announcement in Honolulu when he stopped off at the Barbers Point Naval Air Station on route to the Worean Front He said he expects to have enother assignment.

Station en route to the Korean front. He said he expects to have another assignment on 1 Jan.

Speculation was immediately aroused as to what type of assignment the General had in mind. A dispatch from Honolulu indicated that it would be another tour of duty within the Marine Corps and stated that such an assignment would make General Cates "the second commandant in Marine Corps history to take a lesser command."

Observers in Washington, however, said it might mean a Presidential appointment to a United Nations or diplomatic post. Should the General elect to remain on active duty in the Marine Corps, it would mean that he would have to revert to the rank of lieutenant general in any one of four other top posts, or to major general if he accepted a lesser command.

The only other Commandant in Marine history who took another assignment after serving in the top billet was Maj. Gen. George Barnett, who became commanding general of the Department of the Pacific after completing his tour as Commandant.

Parade Over, But Retirement In Question—Lt. Gen. Elwood R. Quesada, USAF, already has had a retirement parade in his honor—it was held late last month at Bolling AFB, Washington, D. C.—but late this week there was some question about his retirement.

General Quesada, who was in command of Joint Task Force 3 which conducted the atomic tests at Eniwetok Proving Grounds, applied for retirement after more than 25 years of service. His application for retirement, it is recalled, stirred considerable comment on Capitol Hill. Some legislators questioned the retirement from Service at this time of an officer who is 47 years of age.

The retirement parade for General Quesada was held at Bolling AFB on 29
Sept. Hs was given an Oak Leaf Cluster to the Distinguished Service Medal by General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF Chief of Staff. Then, on 5 Oct., the Air Force in Special Orders Number 197 announced officially that General Quesada would retire "upon his own application" effective 31 Oct.

However, subsequent to that order, the Congress voted approval of an amendment to the 1952 appropriation bill which stipulates that voluntary retirements such as General Quesada's must have the approval of the Secretary of Defense. (Previously, Secretary of the Air Force Thomas K. Finletter had approved the application.)

Late this week, the question was asked as to whether Secretary Lovett had approved General Quesada's application. A Defense spokesman told The Journal that "No action has been taken yet on this matter."

The appropriations amendment declares that the Secretary of Defense must approve the application in writing "stating that the retirement is in the best interest of the Service and is required to avoid cases of individual hardship."

Ernie Pyle's Typical Sergeant Sails For FEC-M/Sgt. Adelard Levesque, whom the late Ernie Pyle described as the "typical first sergeant," is off to the wars again. A veteran of World Wars I and II, the sergeant sailed recently from the Seattle Port of Embarkation for the Far East. On hand to see him off was his son, First Lt. Dolar Levesque. The Lieutenant, by reason of flight orders, will arrive in Japan before his dad.

Ranger Training Course—A Ranger Department has been established at the Infantry School, Ft. Benning, Ga., where eight-week courses will begin once a month. One class in four will be for officers.

The Army plans to place 150 Rangers in each Infantry division and will assign one Ranger cadreman in each Infantry company of training divisions.

Admiral's Son Army Aide—First Lt. David Duncan Joy, formerly of the Signal Corps with X Corps in Korea has been assigned to Southwestern Command, Osaka, Honshu, Japan as Aide to Brig. Gen. Carter W. Clarke, USA, Commanding General, Southwestern Command. Lieutenant Joy is the son of Vice Adm. and Mrs. C. Turner Joy, USN. He is a graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, class of 1950.

Study Field Censorship-A joint service committee, appointed by direction of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, has completed work on a new plan for field censorship of news. The classified report, "Public Information, Field Press Censorship", is currently being circulated "for comment" among interested offices within the De-

Navy Bureau of Medicine and Surgery—Rear Adm. Lamont Pugh, Surgeon General of the Navy, on invitation of the New York State Surgical Section of the United States Chapter of the International College of Surgeons, will be the guest of honor and principal speaker at a dinner to be given by the Section, 1 Nov., at the Hotel McAlpin, New York City.

The subject of Admiral Pugh's address will be, "Military Medicine's Dividends". It touches briefly on some of the many contributions made to the science of medicine by the Medical Departments of the Armed Services, which benefit the civilian as well as the military population.

Retroactive Pay, Facts Not Fancies—The House Armed Services Committee, in reporting favorably the legislation to raise military pay by 10 per cent across-the-board, consulted with no finance expert of the Armed Forces before declaring summarily that "tremendous" administrative problems would result from a retroactive pay increase.

As first submitted to Congress, the military pay raise would be retroactive to 1 July 1951. The pay boost for civilian employees of the Government, signed into law this week by President Truman, is retroactive to 1 or 8 July, depending upon the pay period of the individual.

THE JOURNAL this week sought to learn just how much of an administrative problem would be entailed in computing a pay increase back to 1 July.

The response of Pentagon experts was that some extra work would be required, of course, but they reminded that the adoption in 1949 of a new pay card would greatly facilitate the solution of this problem. In 1949, the Army, Navy and Air Force adopted a pay card which is carried by each officer and enlisted man for a six-month period. This card shows every change in pay status.

At the end of the six months (30 June or 31 Dec.), the cards are sent to a central point—St. Louis for the Army, Cleveland for the Navy and Marine Corps, and Denver

be the earliest date possible.

Thus, all of the information necessary to compute the pay increase is readily available at a central source. Admittedly, there would be some cases requiring special attention and more complicated checking of records, but these would be minority situations.

On the whole, because of the adoption of the stream-lined pay system in 1949, the computation of retroactive pay for military personnel likely would not be much more difficult than that necessary to effect back payments to civilian employees. Undoubtedly, members of the House and Senate will question the equity of granting the retroactive pay boost to civilian employees and denying it to military personnel.

the retroactive pay boost to civilian employees and denying it to military personnel.

It is to be hoped that after the pay raise bill clears the House the Senate Armed Services Committee will call the Chiefs of Finance of the Army and Air Force and the head of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts to testify on the problem of retroactive payments.

THE JOURNAL feels certain that this testimony would mitigate the House Armed Services Committee's attitude that the "tremendous" administrative problems involved are a major reason for delaying the effective date of the pay increase until the first day of the month following the date of enactment—1 February 1952 would Deutal Officer Honored—Brig. Gen. Oscar P. Snyder, Director of Dental Activities at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, was elected third vice-president of the American Dental Association during its recent annual meeting held in Washington, D. C. This is the second time in the history of the Association that an Army dental officer has been elected to its governing body. The first occasion was the election of Col. Robert T. Oliver, who was elected president for the 1930-1931 term.

Buck Rogers Era—Gulded missiles, atom bombs and stellar launching platforms faded into insignificance this week as the Navy announced the development of a one-man rocket-powered helicopter which it called the nearest approach yet made "to strapping a pair of rockets upon the back of a man and shooting him into space in comic strip fashion."

The tiny 'copter, weighing less than 100 pounds, is a project of the Rotor-Craft Corp., of Glendale, Calif. It is the first rocket-powered helicopter ever built and is designed to carry a man at a rate of climb never considered possible for a helicopter. The designer said it can land in high mountain areas heretofore inaccessible to aircraft.

Self-starting, throttle-controlled, liquid fuel rockets are mounted in the tips of two small hinged rotor blades which extend above the wearer's head. The rotor is attached to a steel tube which curves downward to support fuel tanks on the wearer's back, the seat on which the pilot rests, and foldable tripod landing gear. A tube with a small rudder extends backward from the rotor hub and another extends forward and down as the pilot's control column.

"Cost of Leaving" Hardships for Marines—All military personnel, says the Department of Defense, urgently need an immediate pay raise to meet cost-of-living increases. This must be especially true for a small group of Marines—who have not been paid at all for nearly a year.

For these Marines, the financial suffering represents the cost-of-leaving civilian life. The incredible plight of these men, previously reported in THE JOURNAL, was told anew this week by the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee. The Senate group declared:

"At Camp Pendleton, subcommittee investigators found a group of reservists who had not been paid since they were recalled to active duty. At the time of recall these men were drawing disability pensions from the Veterans' Administration for wounds received during World War II. Because they refused to waive their pensions they are not authorized to receive active-duty pay. However, Marine Corps policy—

"Does not permit the discharge or release * * * of a reservist who is receiving disability compensation in lieu of actual duty pay when he is found physically qualified for duty."

"Paradoxically, the Veterans' Administration has found these men 'disabled,' while the Marine Corps claims they are fit for full military duty.

"These combat veterans have been on active duty for nearly a year now without pay. Because their status has not been clarified, they have been relegated to the performance of insignificant duties—tending bar, sweeping floors, cleaning barracks. That the Marine Corps has permitted this situation to remain unresolved is deplorable and inexcusable. If legislation was required, it should have been brought to the attention of Congress. If, in fact, these men should not have been discharged, they at least should have been properly utilized."

Prep-School Athletic Experiment—A unique experiment in prep-school athletics is currently being conducted at the Columbian Preparatory School, in Washington, known to older officers as "Schadman's" and "Puhl's"—wherein it is sought to establish that a wedding of sports and scholarship makes an excellent match, one which augurs for happy school days.

Last year Columbian Headmaster R. E. M. Goolsby received specific requests to launch such an experiment from a chairman of an alumni association and a university director of athletics. The experiment got under way last Fall when 16 Columbian football players were permitted to play on a local school team. Permission being granted with an understanding that there would be no deviation from the rigorous weekly check-up tests, and special classes in case of failure.

Of the original 16 "guinea-pig" players, 14 were successful in entering the Service Academies; two went to colleges of their second choice and one got married and entered his home state university. Furthermore, six of the group placed among the nation's top 26 in the competition for Naval Reserve appointment to Annapolis, one of whom won 4th place in the Coast Guard Academy competition and placed 5th in the contest for Presidential appointment to the Naval Academy.

This Fall 27 boys reported for football practice to face a heavy schedule. Twenty-six of the present Columbian squad aspire to the Naval Academy, while one player plans to enter the Coast Guard Academy.

Senator Martin Gets Gunrd Association Medal—Senator Edward Martin (R-Pa.) was awarded this week the Distinguished Service Medal of the National Guard Association. A former Governor of Pennsylvania, former Commanding General of the 28th "Keystone" Division and a veteran of three wars and Mexican Border service, Senator Martin is the immediate Past President of the National Guard Association, which held its 73rd annual General Conference in Washington, D. C., this week.

Another Medal For Retiring FEC Surgeon —Maj. Gen. Edgar Erskine Hume, MC, USA, Chief Surgeon for the Far East Command who will retire in December after 35 years' service, has been awarded his third Distinguished Service Medal. The presentation was made to General Hume—one of the most decorated officers in Army history—by General Matthew B. Ridgway, USA, Commander-in-Chief, United Nations Command.

General Hume will be 62 years of age on 26 Dec. He has been the ranking medical officer in the Far East since July 1949.

1st Cavalry, Decorated Division—A dispatch from the Far East Command reports that through 30 Sept., fighting men of the famed 1st Cavalry Division had won 4,923 medals for heroism in Korea. Purple Hearts awards were not included in this total.

Four members of the division were awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, 62 received the Distinguished Service Cross and 919, the Silver Star. Light plane pilots and aerial observers were decorated with 69 Distinguished Flying Crosses and 594 Air Medals.

SGO Asst. Personnel Chief—Col. Andrew F. Scheele, MC, has been transferred from the Preventive Medicine Division in the Office of the Surgeon General of the Army to the SGO Personnel Division where he will serve as assistant chief under Col. Harold W. Glattly. Colonel Scheele was previously assistant chief and chief of the environmental sanitation branch in the Preventive Medicine Division.

Col. Louis F. Williams, formerly chief medical supply officer at the Schenectady, N. Y., General Depot, has been assigned as executive officer in the Personnel Division of the Office of the Surgeon General.

GUIDED MISSILES

The Air Force Missile Test Center, used by all our military services as a long-range proving ground, stretches thousands of miles from Florida, out over the Bahamas, into the South Atlantic.

A pilotless bomber roars away from its launching stand, picks up speed, zooms into the blue. Setting its course for a far-off target in the ocean, it rockets over a chain of tiny islands where men and machines check its flight, its behavior, the operation of its guidance and control systems. It's a vital part of our air power of the future-aeronautical research and development laying the foundation for continued U.S. air supremacy!

Operated by the USAF's Air Research and Development Command, the Missile Test Center is geared up to test the wide variety of missiles, rockets and pilotless aircraft vital to modern air power. It reached its full stature with the recent completion of down-range observation stations. And the dramatic B-61 pilotless bomber, the Matador, designed and produced by Martin as part of its diversified missiles program, was the first to use the completed range. THE GLENN L. MARTIN COMPANY, Baltimore 3, Maryland.

Service Legislation

Armed Services Committee, was neglected on Capitol Hill throughout the first session of the 82d Congress.

Observers heard not a single Senator or Representative speak out against combat pay, but nonetheless no action was taken to bring the bill to a vote in the Senate, and the House Armed Services Committee did not even touch the bill. The combat pay bill proposes $100 a month for officers and $50 per month for enlisted men in direct action against the enemy. It would be retroactive to the outset of fighting.

There were reports, never confirmed, outset of fighting.

There were reports, never confirmed, that the Senate and House Armed Services Committees crossed signals as regards which group would take up the combat pay bill first and which would consider the Marine Corps bill.

It is to be remembered that the Marine Corps bill, which would expand the personnel strength and provide for representation of the Commandant on the JCS, originally was proposed by Chair-personnel strength and provide for representation of the Commandant on the JCS, originally was proposed by Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.), of the House Armed Services Committee, when the report on "Unification and Strategy" was submitted following the much publicized B-36 hearings. Mr. Vinson made a big point of his dissatisfaction with the treatment accorded the Marine Corps.

Yet, it was the Senate, not the House, which first voted out a bill to expand the Marine Corps and to provide for the Commandant's serving as a "Consultant" to the JCS. The House Committee went further. It declared that the Marine Corps should have a minimum strength of 300,000 (such a "floor" is not provided for any other Service) and maintained that the Commandant should be a voting member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The status of the Marine Corps Commandant is highly controversial and although the House Committee reported the Marine Corps bill several months before Congress adjourned, no action was taken to obtain a rule and bring the measure to a vote.

Marine Corps supporters are certain to demand quick action when Congress resumes its sessions in January. A possibility of a Presidential veto is seen if the House version of the bill should be adopted.

In addition to the cost-of-living pay increase theme is a probability that Possion.

In addition to the cost-of-living pay increases, there is a probability that Representative Paul Kilday (D-Tex.), who heads the Armed Services Subcommittee which considers military pay, will introduce the long-promised omnibous bill of amendments to the Career Compensation Act of 1949. Mr. Kilday has stated that the 10 per cent across-the-board pay boost will not eliminate inequities which have resulted from interpretations of the Career Compensation Act.

boost will not eliminate inequities which have resulted from interpretations of the Career Compensation Act.

Presumably, this omnibous bill of amendments will remedy pay injustices of warrant officers, many of whom receive less pay than enlisted personnel.

Beyond the matters of pay and the Marine Corps Bill, the Congress has been promised a detailed bill from the Pentagon by 1 Feb., setting up a new promotion program for Reservists, which would be comparable in many repects to the Officer Personnel Act of 1947. The Reserve promotion bill would be an adjunct to the basic Reserve Components bill, which has been approved by the House and now must receive Senate endorsement.

Because the fiscal year 1952 budget of 536.9 billion did not include funds for the fighting in Korea, a supplemental appropriations bill probably will be introduced early in the new session. Then, of course, the annual military appropriations will be sent to Capitol Hill, possibly about 1 April, and here will be demonstrated whether or not a sustained and orderly military build-up will be supported.

The 1952 appropriations provide $19.8

and orderly fillitary building will be supported.

The 1952 appropriations provide $19.8 billion for the Army; $15.5 billion for the Navy; and $19.9 billion for the Alr Force.

In connection with the plan for a sustained and orderly military expansion, the second session will be confronted with the recurring UMT problem.

A resume of legislation enacted into law during the first session of the 82d Congress reveals that National Defense measures occupied much of the attention of the legislators. Authorizations for military and naval constructions, appropriations to cover costs of such installations, housing, and changes in existing laws related to personnel of the armed forces vied with international matters for the attention of the House and Senate.

Investigation of the Far East situa-tion, involving General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, held the interest of Douglas MacArthur, held the interest of the Senate Committee on Armed Serv-ices in the early part of the session and interfered with its consideration of de-fense legislation — interference finally overcome to a large degree in the latter part of the session.

In addition to the 1952 military appro-In addition to the 1952 military appropriations, two supplementary measures were enacted calling for over $4 billion dollars for fiscal 1952 for military public works, and over $1,500,000,000 for independent agencies, of which $26,473,182 was earmarked for the Department of Defense for flood control and relief in Defense for flood control and relief in occupied areas.

occupied areas.

Aside from military matters included in the appropriation bills, H.R. 4914 (Pub. Law 155), was enacted calling for an authorization of $5,864,301,178 for military and naval construction, as follows: Army, within and outside the continental U. S.—$1,418,025,528; Navy, within and outside the U. S.—$831,847,850, Air Force, within and outside the U. S.—$3,480,661,800. For joint military installations—a total of $133,766,000. Included in the above sums are the following amounts for sums are the following amounts for housing: $1,174,055,108 for troops, $153,-280,212 for bachelor officers' quarters, and $111,145,500 for family quarters, a total of $1,438,480,820.

Special housing legislation was enacted late in the session for veterans of the Korean conflict, granting them (in S. 2244) priority in renting and purchasing

Early in the session, authorization was approved (Pub. Law 3, H.R. 1001) for the construction of, or acquiring and conversion of not more than 500,000 tons of modern naval vessels, and for the conversion of not to exceed 1,000,000 tons of existing naval vessels. Secretary of Defense.

Of outstanding importance was the enactment of the so-called Draft Act which included various provisions as to the age of inductees, the size of the armed forces until 1954, the use of reservists, basic training to be required, and the total service to be required of inductees. In the Act is a provision for the appointment of a five-man National Security Training Commission which is charged with the duty of formulating a Universal Military Training Program. This is to be presented for the action of Congress at the opening of its session in January, 1952.

ment and the number of colonels authorized for the promotion list concerned may be exceeded by the number of such officers of that promotion list so retained, but in no event shall any such officer be so retained after reaching the age of sixty years."

Army officials are anxious that a decision be reached at the highest levels so that word can go out to these colonels in time for them to make plans. Many of these officers have expressed the desire to remain on active duty, especially in view of the current situation. But if it will be impossible for them to be retained, it is felt that this information should be relayed as quickly as possible so that the officers may make plans.

Some of the colonels who would be retired after 30 years service and five years in grade are in their early fifties.

The legislation to block their forced retirement has been introduced by Senator Harry Cain (R-Wash), a member of the Armed Services Committee.

The bill (S. 2347) would change the effective date of the Section 514 provision of the Officer Personnel Act from 30 June 1953 to 30 June 1956. Senator Cain said the Army proposed the 1956 date to the Personnel Policy Board.

Senator Cain stated also that the compulsory retirement age in the Officer Personnel Act be fixed at "not less than age 60."

Concluding his remarks in support of Concluding his remarks in support of the bill, which undoubtedly will receive consideration when Congress reconvenes in January, Senator Cain said:

"I am of the sincere opinion that not only is it unwise to compel the bulk of our officers to retire in their early fifties (which is what the operations of the present provisions of the act will do) and thus lose to the Department of Defense experience and mature judgment expensively bought just at the time when it can be capitalized on most profitably but that neither the Congress nor the country will tolerate it when they come to the full realization of what the retirement provisions of the present Personnel Act will do if allowed to stand."

Observer Training Change
A second chance has opened up for aviation cadet and student officer eliminees in the pilot training program who have passed their 27th birthday. If otherwise qualified, they can now enter observer training.
Influenced by the increasing need for observers, USAF Headquarters has reversed the former ruling that observer training could not begin past the age of
27. Under certain circumstances, this second chance to be a rated officer is now

The pilot training eliminee must desire the observer training. He must fulfill all requirements for the training and must be available for entry into the course without delay. He must also be recommended for the training by the board which eliminated him from further pilot training.

This new ruling does not effect observer trainees eliminated from a class who wish to enter pilot training. To qualify for pilot training, they must, as before, be younger than 27 when entering the course.

Bernswick, Me. The Officers' Wives'
Club of the 654th AC&W Squadron at Brunswick, Me., held their October meeting at the Bath Country Club with a fine attendance of both members and the Associate members, consisting of Army and Navy wives in the vicinity.

Because of the vacancy created by the departure of the former president, Mrs. L. M. Lewis, who is accompanying her husband to California, new officers were installed. They are Mrs. W. F. Brothers, president; Mrs. D. M. Sweet, treasurer; Mrs. J. L. Newsom, secretary; and Mrs. A. L. Price, executive member-at-large. It was decided that the new meeting place of the Club would be the Harriet Beecher Stowe House, and the meetings will be held the second Tuesday of each month.

Among the activities conducted by the Club is a project, under the guidance of the Red Cross Committee, for making slippers for wheel-chair patients at Veterans hospitals. The entertainment committee has organized bowling teams, square dancing and dramstics for the club members.

NORTHERN COMMAND, HACHINOHE, JAPAN. Col. Richard L. Pooley, Commanding Officer, Camp Haugen, was recently awarded the Bronze Star for meritorious service while in command of an Infantry Regiment in Korea last year.

Brig. Gen. Andrew C. Tychsen, USA, Commanding General, Northern Command, made the presentation at a quiet ceremony at Camp Haugen.

BROOKE AMC, TEX. A reception honoring Col. Lynn H. Tingay on his promotion to brigadier general, Army Dental Corps, was held 15 Oct., at Medical Field Service School Officers' Mess, with several hundred officers and their wives in attendance.

In the reception line with General Tingay and his wife were the school commandant, and the assistant commandant, Brig. Gen. Crawford F. Sams, and Mrs. Sams.

A 34-year veteran of Army dental service, General Tingay has directed dental training activities at Medical Field Service School for five years in addition to other dental services at Brooke Army Hospital and the Central Dental Laboratory.

World War II. It is announced here by Maj. Gen. William M. Morgan, District commander.

As wartime commander of United States Air Force bases at Borinquen Field, Puerto Rico; Abilene, Texas, and Dale Mabry Field, Florida, Colonel Gaines "displayed unusual leadership and organizational ability as evidenced by the high state of morale within his commands," according to the citation.

Colonel Gaines now resides at 515 South La Fayette Park Place, Los Angeles, with Mrs. Gaines (the former Katherine Marbois Jones) and their daughter, Katherine. Their son, Edmund P., jr., is a captain in the Air Force.

**SOUTHERN PINES, N. C. Brig. Gen. Leonard E. Thomas, Chief of Staff for the California Air National Guard, led a distinguished class of student officers in last week's Indoctrination Course at USAF Air-Ground Operations School (USAFAGOS), commanded by Brig. Gen. William M. Gross.

Throughout the week at USAFAGOS, General Thomas, with both Air Force and Army officers, had the opportunity to hear and see the Air Force and Army instructors working side by side, giving the doctrine and practical application of Air-Ground operation to key personnel of the Armed Services, climaxed by the weekly presentation by U. S. Marine officers of the Marine concept of tactical air-ground operations.

Student officer classmates of General Thomas included: Col. Arthur T. Frontczak, Director of Operation and Services, Hq. 1st. Air Force, Mitchel Air Force Base, N. Y.; Col. Selby F. Little, Commanding Officer CC'R', 5th Armored Division, Camp Chaffee, Arkansas; and Col. Frank P. Williams, Chief of Staff for Headquarters 34th Division at Des Moines, Iowa.

8 FT. JACKSON, S. C. Gen, and Mrs. Mark W. Clark were house guests of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Harry J. Collins on 14 and 15 Oct. General and Mrs. Collins entertained his staff, regimental commanders, and their ladies, in honor of General and Mrs. Clark, with a cocktail party at the Commanding General's Quarters, followed by a dinner-dance at the Legion Lake Officers' Mess, Monday evening. General Collins introduced General Clark, who gave a brief, amusing, and inspiring talk.

who gave a brief, amusing, and inspiring talk.

After touring the post and visiting the Nursery, Commissary, Thrift Shop, Post Exchange, and Culture Center, Mrs. Clark was guest of honor at a Ladles Luncheon at the Legion Lake Mess, attended by Mrs. James F. Byrnes, wife of the Governor, and 400 ladies of Fort Jackson. Mrs. Collins gracious-ty presented her guest who spoke on the Army Life of an Army Wife, answered questions, and told the good news that she and the General had spoken that morning to their son, Bill, in Tokyo. He was returning from the operating room where he underwent his third operation after his third wound in Korea. They learned that he had just received his battlefield promotion to Major.

National Guard Association

The National Guard Association this week criticized Pentagon policies regard-ing promotions and levies on National Guard units.

Guard units.

The charge was made at the 73d General Conference in Washington, D. C., that National Guard officials have not been consulted adequately on these and other problems resulting from partial mobilization. These allegations are in conflict with other reports that Army and Air Force officials have taken especial precautions to make certain that key National Guard officials are kept informed of developments.

The Association reelected as its presi-

The Association reelected as its president Maj. Gen. Ellard A. Walsh of Minnesota. Brig. Gen. W. H. Abendroth, who nesota. Brig. Gen. W. H. Abendroth, who has been named to head the Army division of the National Guard Bureau and who is commander of the District of Columbia National Guard, was elected treasurer to succeed the late Brig. Gen. Milton R. McLean, adjutant general of Kansas Kansas.

Promotion Policies Hit

The criticism of promotion policies was enunciated by General Walsh in his presidential address. On the matter of promotions and his insistence that National Guard officers are being discriminated against, General Walsh had this to say:

Guard officers are being discriminated against, General Walsh had this to say:

"The matter of a promotion system divides itself into two categories, namely, promotion in time of peace and promotion in time of war. It has always seemed passing strange that, during a period of thirty-four years in which this country has engaged in two World Wars, those responsible have either been unable or unwilling to devise and implement an equitable promotion system. The matter of promotions received serious consideration by the Subcommittee on Civilian Components of the House Armed Services Committee during the time the Armed Forces Reserve Act of 1951 was under consideration. At that time all concerned were in accord that the establishment of such a system was long overdue, but were not prepared to submit concrete proposals. Accordingly, the Committee directed the Office of the Secretary of Defense to prepare and submit to the Congress, on or before 1 Feb. 1952, the draft of a Bill providing for the establishment of a promotion system in the Reserve Components of the Armed Forces in time of peace. Since that time the several Departments have been engaged in the preparation of such a Bill, and the National Guard Bureau and the Na latest of which was the draft of 2 Oct., which was considered by the Army Section 5 Committee on National Guard and Reserve Policy on 8 Oct. with representatives of the National Guard and Reserve Officers Association meeting with the Committee. At that time the Representatives of the National Guard and the Adjutants General Associations were compelled to take the position that they were not prepared to deal with the proposal at length inasmuch as copies of the draft of the Bill had only been received twenty-four hours prior to the meeting. Arrangements have been made by representatives of G-1 of the Army and A-1 of the Air Force to present the proposals to this Conference.

"The National Guard Association is also concerned with the establishment of a promotion system in time of war, for it is far from satisfied with the promotion system or lack of promotion system which existed during World War I and more notably during World War II. There seems to be a divergence of opinion between the National Guard Association on one hand and the Department of the Army on the other hand as to the equities in the matter of promotions in connection with the present emergency. The Department of the Army contends that with reference to the over-all picture, Reserve personnel have been justly and equitably treated, while the National Guard Association takes a contrary view. with the corresponding Air Force eche-lon. The Eastern Army Antiaircraft Command works with the Eastern Air Command works with the Eastern Air Defense Force at Stewart Air Force Base, New York; the Western Army Antialr-craft Command is with the Western Air Defense Force at Hamilton Field, California; and the Central Army Antiair-craft Command is at Kansas City, head-quarters of the Central Air Defense

On the one hand, the headquarters of the Army Antiaircraft Command serves as the focal point of contact between the two major operating agencies of the Army and the Air Force on air defense matters. On the other hand, from the viewpoint of the Army, the headquarters is comparable in its command function to an Army Corps headquarters. This comparison derives from the essentially operational functions common to both. Another basis of comparison is the fact that necessary logistical support for all units of the Army Antiaircraft Command as well as such administrative support functions as may be required is provided by the six Continental Army Command-

The Air Force, through its Air Defense Command, has developed an effective method for the employment of its warn-ing system and fighter interceptors. The fighters, with their great tactical and strategic mobility, are considered the most effective area defense weapons. The Army antialrcraft ground-to-air fire power, delivered by guns or guided mis-siles, is an added defense measure designed to give on-the-spot protection to pecific locations.

An illustrative example is offered by a fleet at sea. The carrier-based fighters protect the force as a whole from an en-emy air attack, while the ship's antiair-craft defends each individual vessel.

Thus, in the air defense of the United States, the Air Force fighters and the Army antiaircraft complement each other, and neither should be considered as a substitute for the other. It is obvi-ous that the combat capabilities of each force must be coordinated closely for the most effective utilization of the combined fire power available to the entire air de-fense team. Tactically, this coordina-tion is achieved for each antiaircraft-defended area by operational control proce dures exercised at the air defense divi sion level, based on doctrines prescribed at the Department level and agreements between the two senior commanders.

High level decisions having been made for the defense of certain vital areas in the United States, the Army Antiaircraft Command assumed as its first mission the development of detailed plans for the defense of these areas, in coordination with the Air Force, Continental Army Commanders and, in certain instances, with appropriate echelons of the Navy. These plans have been approved and can be acted upon by brigade, group, and battalion commanders. Toward this end the Command, working in conjunction with the several Continental Armies that pro-vide logistical support, has pushed forward a program of acquiring battery sites. This plan has meant, in some in-stances, the use of government property, the leasing of private real estate, and in others, the securing of rights of acce-over public land owned by state an municipal agencies.

To maintain maximum combat effectiveness, the Army Antiaircraft Com-mand carries out a three-phased training program for its units on a continuing basis. First is training in the various mili-tary duties and subjects normal to any Army unit. Second is a system of service practices. By rotating units to firing ranges, each battery fires live ammuni-tion at targets towed by aircraft. Joint operational training, the third phase, is accomplished by participation in air de fense exercises with the Air Defense fense exer Command.

Results of these exercises are kept under close study with respect to the effec-tiveness of antiaircraft artillery as well as that of Air Force elements. Deficiencies are corrected and air defense system thereby strengthened. This training is a continuous process, in order that our state of readiness may be maintained at the highest possible level.

The threat of air attacks is real. The requirement for effective air defense is essential. The Army Antiaircraft Com-mand is prepared to make a worthy con-tribution to our national security.

fire from enemy shore batteries the U.S. Heavy Cruiser Helena and escorting de-stroyers steamed into the harbor at Hungnam and shelled military installations. Red shore artillery took the British De-stroyer Concord under attack, but prompt return fire from the vessel's main battery silenced the enemy guns.

Subsequently, the Helena, the Concord and the U.S. Destroyer Eversole engaged in duels with other Hungnam shore bat-teries. Air spotters reported that several enemy gun positions were completely de-

The Helena and the Eversole later joined the U.S. Destroyer Stormes and other Allied ships in an intense bombard-ment of the battered port of Wonsan. The big 8-inch guns of the Helena's main battery scored direct hits on supply dumps, trenches, gun positions, railway tracks and highways.

On the eastern extremity of the battle line near Kosong the U.S. Destroyer Wal-ler provided naval gunfire support for South Korean troops in the coastal sec tor, shelling enemy troops and gun posi-tions. Later the Waller steamed up the coast to Kojo and fired at gun emplacements and troop concentrations. Heavy enemy casualties were reported.

Other naval surface vessels bombarded communications facilities at Songjin Chuuronjang and Chongjin. On the west coast the British Commonwealth frigate group prowled the upper reaches of the Han River estuary, and shelled enemy positions along the north bank.

Carrier-based navy fighters and bomb-ers from Task Force 77 off the east coast inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy, hit truck convoys, and cut rail tracks in scores of places. Panther Jets from the U. S. Heavy Carrier Essex hit troop concentrations and destroyed or damaged a number of bridges. An air group from U. S. Heavy Carrier Antietam wrecked truck convoys north of Wonsan, and hit railways and supply warehouses.

Australian pilots from the Carrier Sidney off the west coast engaged in rescue operations, and also blasted the railway line leading from Sinuiju in the northwest corner of Korea south to Pyongyang, the North Korean capital.

In addition to engaging in numerous spectacular air battles with enemy aircraft the Far East Air Force this week flew numerous missions in close tactical support of ground troops, and con-tinued the extensive interdiction program against enemy lines of communication in North Korea.

B-29 Superforts not only bombed two new Red airfields in Northwest Korea but also hit marshalling yards at Yandok and Hamhung, a barracks area at Kyomipo, and the east airfield at Pyongyang. They also made night attacks on enemy front-line positions with air-bursting, anti-personnel bombs.

Allied fighter-bombers cratered railroad tracks, destroyed railway cars and locomotives, knocked out enemy vehicles, and hit bridges and gun positions. In close air support strikes they covered enemy bunkers, gun positions and enemy-occupied buildings with blazing napalm, and riddled them with machinegun fire. American light B-26 bombers in night raids struck enemy vehicles, gun posi-tions, searchlights, and rolling stock. Hundreds of enemy trucks were destroyed or damaged. Preliminary reports indicated that one entire railway train was destroyed.

In a statement issued this week General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, praised the work of Air Force and Navy flyers in destroying enemy transportation facilidestroying enemy transportation ities, saying:

"Flyers of the U. S. Air Force and the U. S. Navy, as well as those of other United Nations, have been doing a marvelous job in keeping after the rail and highway arteries running down through North Korea.
"One of the very important reasons why their sightings of trucks, carts, and other vehicles have been increasing in recent months is that air operations have knocked out the railway system in North Korea so badly that the enemy has been forced to use trucks. On one of the principal railroads left to the enemy south of the AF interdiction line the longest stretch of rail is 12 miles.

"Air Force and Naval planes have been

"Air Force and Naval planes have been destroying an enormous number of trucks. Our aerial operations against enemy movement of supplies and reinforcements toward the battle area have been costing somebody approximately 7,000 trucks a month."

Thus far in the Korean war 335 United Nations land planes have been shot down by enemy ground fire or in air combat, by far the greater number by ground fire. During the war Allied Air Force pilots have destroyed 241 enemy planes, probably destroyed 89, and damaged 264, for a total of 594 Red planes destroyed or damaged. These totals do not include losses of Allied carrier-based planes or damage inflicted by them on enemy air-

During the past four months the United States Far East Air Force planes and attached aircraft from other nations and land-based United States Marine planes have concentrated on an interdiction program of systematically knocking out enemy rail and road networks, with a view to isolating the battle area and making it extremely difficult for the Reds to provide logistic support for their combat

In this period Allied air attacks have pounded rail beds, hit locomotives and boxcars, wrecked bridges, knocked out highway traffic, and sealed railway tunnels in which trains sought shelter. From 30 June to 15 Oct. of this year it is estimated that 72 enemy aircraft were demated that 72 enemy aircraft were destroyed, 20 probably destroyed, and 204 damaged. The Air Force also claims to have destroyed or damaged 28,990 enemy vehicles, 173 locomotives, 6,300 railway cars, 121 tunnels, 751 bridges, 16,356 buildings, and 62 tanks.

In 107 days the Far East Air Force planes flew 66,707 sorties over Korea, of which 34,772 were combat missions. Sorties in the state of the ties in close tactical support of ground troops averaged 100 per day. During this same period the Far East Air Force lost 53 planes in combat. Only ten of these were due to enemy air activity. The other losses were due to ground fire or undetermined causes.

It is estimated that the enemy now has readily available in Manchuria more than 1,200 military aircraft, of which at least one-half are MIG-15 jets. In operations over North Korea enemy aircraft, for the most part, remained rather close to the Manchurian border, though in recent op-erations there has been a marked increase in aggressiveness of Red pilots and a greater tendency to fly farther south. Pre-sumably enemy jet planes have increased their range by the use of wing tanks. Efforts of the Reds to build new airfields and rebuild old ones in North Korea have been largely unsuccessful. As soon as material progress in constructing Red air-fields has been made heavy Allied air at-tacks have wrecked them. Despite this the Communists have continued determined efforts to get new fields closer to the front, with the apparent object of using their strengthened air power to influence combat operations.

One noticeable result of the heavy air interdiction strikes on rail lines has been the practical abandonment by the Reds of rail movements south of the 39th Supplies are transferred to hich try to get through to the parallel. trucks which front at night over secondary roads. The loss of rail transportation has occasioned a great increase of enemy truck traffic along the roads 50 to 60 miles back of the front line.

The Department of Defense this week released details of the recovery of a wrecked MIG-15 enemy jet plane on the west coast of Korea last July. British pilots located the wreckage of the enemy plane in shallow water on the northwest coast. Personnel, surface vessels and air-craft of Great Britain, South Korea, and the United States cooperated in the dar-ing salvage of the plane, which after three days of intensive effort was loaded on the USS Whetstone, a landing ship-dock, and subsequently brought to the United States, where the enemy jet is now under study at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio.

General Norstad and others, presumably on means of speeding up appreciably the building of airstrips and bases in France itself for U.S. Air Force operations. There is need for speeding up, in order to provide escape from the awkward post-1945 arrangement of our tactical air installations in support of General Handy's ground establishment in Germany. The difficulty has been two-Germany. The difficulty has been two-sided, with ourselves and the French sharing the blame for delay in getting the work under way. The French have been understandably reluctant to evict Frenchmen from farms and villages in order to convert productive property into airbases, until it is clearly necessary to do so. Our own people have been equally reluctant to make a tight schedule of exactly when that property will be required for airbases

It will be recalled that something of the same sort was involved in Morocco last winter, when Mr. Finletter made his earlier trip, the result of which is now visible—two huge airbases in partial operation, a third decided upon, and two more in the negotiation stage. It is pos-sible that from his recent trip there will be comparable results, the need for which is very real, and the means of attaining which ought to be decided upon by both France and the United States without delay.

Until this week there has been no pub-Until this week there has been no public announcement of what is actually under way in French Morocco, but it now is possible to identify some of the big, modern air installations in Morocco which have hitherto been referred to only in very general terms. Two of them are now in partial operation, although not to any such extent as is possible. not to any such extent as is possible These are Sidislimane, which lies 60 miles northeast of Rabat, and Nonasseur, which lies 22 miles south of Casablanca. The first is devised as a base for our Strategic Air Command, the second primarily for maintenance and transport, although ob-vlously both can take on additional functions. The one was completed in 66 days after groundbreaking and the other in 83 days, which is something to make an Arab's eyes swim and to shake the aplomb of our European allies as well. Both fields are so large that they can accommodate any kind of plane now known projected, and in considerable number, th are designed to provide full service and maintenance in support of U.S. Air Forces in Europe and the Mediterranean.

The third Moroccan location is announced as at Benguerir, which lies 90 miles south of Casablanca and 20 miles north of Marrakech. If it took the Amer-ican engineers and technicians, using thousands of French and Arab laborers, less than three months to transform desert sand and rock into two finished airfields, not much more time seems likely to be needed for Benguerir. It also may be assumed that arrangements are closed for the two remaining airfields not yet publicly designated, and that accordingly the U. S. Air Forces' needs in French Morocco are well on the way to being cared for.

These functions have only a distant relationship to those of Wheelus airfield, just outside Tripoll in Libya. Wheelus has just outside Tripoll in Libya. Wheelus has been operating for nearly three years on a quite public basis, as a staging point of transport operations to Arabia and the east. The likeness is only in the size of the fields and the circumstance that all can be of large use to our combat forces in Europe forces in Europe.

Developments in the bitter contest between Britain and Egypt continue to have a bearing on the European theater by reason of Suez' relationship to the Eastern Mediterranean, itself now a large part of North Atlantic Treaty Organization planning British shilling to maintain tion planning. British ability to maintain the canal is not in question, but it is man-ifest that NATO operations would be on a more satisfactory basis if the canal's security ware accord. a more satisfactory basis if the canals security were assured by a calmer arrangement, with Egypt participating voluntarily. This was the NATO plan, which would have been carried out had Egyptian zealots been endowed with a little more foresight. It is a plan which can be revived when and if the present uproar revived when and if the present uproar subsides a bit, as Egypt's leaders acquire a better understanding of what is at stake

M/Sgt. (Col.) William G. Schauffler, jr., USAF

M/Sgt. William G. Schauffler, jr., USAF, died at Otis AFB, Mass., 22 Oct., at the age of 59. Funeral services were held at the Base and interment was at Arlington National Cemetery, Va.

Sergeant Schauffler had the distinction of being one of the Air Force's oldest reserve officers, having been commissioned in April 1917. During the twenties, he retired, was recalled to active duty after Pearl Harbor and attained the rank of colonel during World War II. Subsequent to the war, although recommended for a brigadier general, he was retired as over-age-in-grade. However, upon being told by Lt. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer that his services were needed, Sergeant Schauffler re-enlisted the next day as a master sergeant. Existing laws prevented his being restored to his former rank of colonel; however, it was then agreed that on the day before his 60th birthday, 23 November 1951, he would be separated as a master sergeant, the next day would be recalled to active duty as a colonel and immediately thereafter be retired in that rank. Sergeant Schauffler's service included an association with the late General "Billy" Mitchell and his participation as a main witness in support of General Mitchell's charges at the latter's court martial. Sergeant Schauffler was twice recommended for the Distinguished Service Cross and held the French Croix de Generre.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Augusta deForrest Schauffler, and a daughter, Mrs. Gerard Hawkins of Winchester, Mass. An only son, William G. Schauffler, 3d, was killed in the Pacific in World War II.

"It is recognized that certain deficiencies of the above type have existed in the past, and we are grateful that the Johnson subcommittee has brought these to our attention. It is believed that corrective action has been taken and that nothing further need be done at this time in this connection."

The memorandum was addreased to Acting Secretary Francis P. Whitehair.

Following are the texts of the Summary and Conclusions and the Recommendations made by the Preparedness Subcommittee:

and Conclusions and the Recommendations made by the Preparedness Subcommittee:

Summary and Conclusions

(1) Naval and Marine personnel at the camps surveyed have plenty of good food; they are adequately clothed. Except in certain areas at Camp Pendleton, housing is satisfactory.

Health records are excellent. Hospital and infirmaries are well equipped and staffed with sufficient medical personnel.

(2) Facilities for athletics and recreation are ample.

(3) Some dissatisfaction at three Marine installations existed. Elsewhere morale was satisfactory. The dissatisfaction and Camp Lejuene may be traced in the first instance to the Reserce recall procedures. This was aggravated by poor utilization of reservists and the failure to keep them sufficiently informed. The establishment of an intelligent troop information program is of vital and immediate importance.

Enlisted personnel feel that it is futile to take their grievances to their superior officers. They also fear reprisals.

A fundamental right of our citizen-soldiers is being impaired by the issuance of official orders discouraging communication with Members of Congress. Corrective action must be taken without further delay.

(4) Hazardous-duty compensation payments—amounting to 30-40 percent of base pay—are being made to personnel assigned to submarine staff forces. The law in regard to the additional compensation directs that such payments be made to all personnel suffering the hazards and discomfort of submarine duty. However, men charged with supervision and command functions, who are rarely exposed to the perils of undersea operations, have been drawing the extra compensation. It was not the intention of Congress to award hazardous-duty pay to noncrew personnel when they are not exposed to hazards. The present policy governing eligibility for extra compensation should be thoroughly reviewed by the Secretary of the Navy and the Comptroller General.

(5) Our sailors and marines are well trained. Instructors are competent. Some shortages of equipment, su seriously impair the effectiveness of training programs.

(6) There are still too many—many too many—able-bodied men in "chair corps" jobs. Recruiting of Waves and women narines has lagged. Limited-service personel are not being used as widely as possible.

Military commanders and supervisory personnel have not been sufficiently indoctrinated with the importance of saving manpower. Overstaffing of overhead activities goes on.

Recommendations

Recommendations

(1) That the Department of the Navy include in its fitness reports on Navy and Marine Corps officers a new category designated "Cost consciousness." An important factor in the determination of an officer's efficiency should be his demonstrated ability to conserve men, money, and materials. Such ability should be one of the basic qualifications required for promotion and advancement.

(2) That the possibility of effecting greater savings in the salvage and sale of food crates and other scrap materials be thoroughly ex-plored.

and other scrap materials be thoroughly explored.

(3) That deficiencies in the housing and sanitary facilities in the tent areas at Camp Pendleton—as noted in this report—be promptly corrected.

(4) That the Marine Corps Commandant take immediate steps to eliminate dissatisfaction at Camps Lejuene and Pendleton and El Toro Air Base by—

(a) Better dissemination of accurate and complete information regarding status of Reserve personnel.

(b) Inauguration of a more effective troop information program to keep enlisted men acquainted with Marine Corps policy and its effect on them as individuals. Troops should also be kept informed of the significance of international events.

(c) Establishment of "request mast" and inspection systems which will in fact afford enlisted personnel a fair and private hearing for their grievances without fear of reprisals being taken against them.

(d) Recission of directives impairing the right of personnel to correspond with Members of Congress.

(5) That the payment of submarine-duty compensation to non-crew personnel be made only when personnel are exposed to the hazards of such duty. Further, that the Secretary of the Navy and the Comptroller General review the subject and report their findings and opinions to this subcommittee.

(6) That the number of able-bodied men in "chair corps" positions be further reduced, by replacing them with Waves and women marines, or limited-service personnel.

(7) That steps be taken to indoctrinate military commanders and supervisors with the importance of saving manpower wherever possible. Further, that these personnel begiven training in management techniques and the proper utilization of manpower-further, that a service-wide campaign be organized to keep all personnel manpower-conscious.

(8) That overstaffing of activities and mal-ssignment of personnel be eliminated at

(9) That the Secretary of the Navy report to this subcommittee what action, if any, will be taken to correct the deficiencies noted in this report.

of 1951 before the Subcommittee on Civilian Components of the House Armed Services Committee, I had occasion to point out that out of a total of 531 lieutenant colonels promoted to the grade of colonel in the Army, only one was a NGUS officer, and 20 were Reserve officers, and that we were at a loss to account for the single NGUS officer among those promoted and that obviously it has been an oversight or a mistake to which observation the Department of the Army took exception. Shortly thereafter, 1,155 majors were promoted to the grade of lieutenant colonel, and of this number 1,135 were Regular officers, 20 were Reserve officers, and none was NGUS. Draw your own conclusions. "It is to be questioned if there will ever be such a thing as an equitable promotion system in time of emergency where the Guard and Reserves are concerned, and particularly in connection with the Department of the Army, so long as relative rank is determined by active service as provided in Section 127-a-(7) of the National Defense Act, as amended. The remedy, if remedy there be, would seem to lie in following the example of the Naval and Marine Reserve, where the date of relative rank is determined by the date of the commission."

Levies Are Criticized

The action of the Army high command in breaking up National Guard units is "ruthless and unsound," Senator Martin (R-Pa.), declared in his address to the conference.

Senator Martin, a former president of the association, was Commanding Gen-eral of the 28th Division, Pennsylvania National Guard, and trained that divi-sion for overseas service in World War

The policy of stripping National Guard units of their officers and key non-commissioned officers for replacements is harmful to morale and efficiency, Senator Martin asserted.

To Build Navy Plane

General Motors announced this week that it has received a letter contract to produce a Grumman-designed airplane as a prime contractor for the Navy. The announcement was made by James E. Goodman, general manager of the Buick-Oldsmobile-Pontiac Assembly Division of General Motors.

Mr. Goodman said that a new "dual-purpose" plant to manufacture the air-planes will be built on a 255-acre site at Arlington, Tex., between Dallas and Fort Worth.

During World War II General Motors Eastern Aircraft Division produced nearly 13,500 Grumman bomber and fighter planes for the Navy at its Trenton and Linden plants in New Jersey.

Predicts Robot Ships

Within the next 10 years, ships of the American merchant marine will be robot-controlled, it was forecast recently at the 25th joint annual Propeller Club and American Merchant Marine Convention at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York

"Electronic developments in marine design mean increasing automatic control from bridge to keel," reported Maurice R. Eastin, manager of the transportation Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Company.

"Even today, it would be possible, under ideal conditions, to sail a ship from port to port under almost full robot con-trol," he said. "So highly developed are automatic navigation devices, automatic boiler controls, and master controls of propulsion machinery that a single crew member, sitting before a specially built control panel, could supervise the ship's entire voyage."

Turboprop Trainers Ordered

The Air Force has ordered a "small number" of pressurized T-29 Consolidated number of pressurized T-29 Consolidated Vultee trainers equipped with Allison T-38 turboprop engines for service test purposes. The aircraft will be built at Convair's San Diego, Calif., plant.

The turboprop engine, basically a gas turbine which drives a propeller, will give the trainer improved speed and allitude performance. Considerable resignifications of the constant of the

The standard T-29, a military version of a Convair commercial airliner, is designed as a flying classroom capable of accommodating up to 14 navigation and bombardment students.

Improved performance of the turboprop version will increase the plane's useful-ness for high altitude navigational and bombardment training.

Harvard Logistics Group

The Air Force has entered into a con-tract with the School of Business Administration at Harvard University for an analysis of overall logistics problems.

All members of the Harvard Logistics Group, which will make the survey, have been issued security clearance up to and including the "Secret" classification. The study will be made during the course of a one year's contract.

Military Supply Planes

Details of a new convertible military supply plane ordered in large quantities by the U. S. Navy and Air Force for world air transport of cargo, passengers or battle casualties have been revealed by Lockheed Aircraft Corporation.

Lockheed Aircraft Corporation.

The huge triple-duty transports, designed primarily for military cargo purposes, belong to the same four-engined family as Lockheed Constellations and new Super Constellations, commercial airliners backlogged now at nearly $100. 000,000, according to Robert E. Gross, Lockheed president.

Lockheed president.

They are designated as the Navy R70-1 and Air Force C-121C. They will be the military sister ships of Lockheed's new 5-cent-a-ton-mile all-cargo Super Constellations, recently introduced to commer cial airlines. Military authorities said the cargo planes would be faster than commercial models, rated at 315-335 m.p.h.

Versatility stems from the plane's convertibility to either a 106-passenger troop transport or a flying mercy ship for as many as 73 litter patients, besides doctors nd nurses.

The craft will be equipped with re-

The new transports, 18.4 feet longer than earlier Lockheed C-121s, will have a main cabin 82 feet long. Total cargo capacity will range from about 40,000 to 43,000 pounds, in 5,463 cubic feet of space. Cabin flooring is constructed of extruded, hat shaped corrugations of high-strength, light-weight magnesium. Each plane will have a "mechanical stevedore," a sub-floor conveyor with moving hooks for tugging heavy boxes to their stowage place. A portable 10,000-pound capacity cargo elevator can further facilitate car-for them as well as for NATO.

Related as the Suez and Sudan issues are by reason of the cancelled Anglo-Egyptian treaties governing both areas, and the uncompromising demands of Egypt, they offer two separate problems. The Sudan issue brings from Sir James Robertson, British Civil Secretary, in an address to the Sudanese legislature, the assurance that the British Governor General will remain, and that there will be a continued effort to provide the Sudan with a "self-governing constitution" by the end of 1952.

With regard to Suez, which is of greater immediate concern to the United States, the State Department indicates its intention of proceeding with a multi-nation arrangement for protection of the Canal. Since Egypt has declined to participate there now is contemplated a board made up of members from the United States, Britain, France, and Turkey (as previously) amplified now by representatives of Australia, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa. Further invitations may go to nearby Arab states, but these must await a setting-up of NATO's Middle East Command, itself still fluid and likely to remain so until the Rome meeting of old and new NATO members makes it solid.

It becomes more and more apparent

Makes it solid.

It becomes more and more apparent that the Council of NATO Ministers, at their meeting in Rome next month, will have a good many things to grapple with—the Eastern Mediterranean Command, the terms for admitting Greece and Turkey, the calming of the Egyptian turmoil, the settlement, if possible, of the Trieste issue as a part of the proposed arrangement with Tito, and the very large issues involving West Germany. It is a considerable list of agenda.
